Be Careful With Matches Let Him Live If Mr. Harding Means It Debs' Change of Mind

—By Arthur Brisbane—

The New York Times says: "Evidence accumulates that there are furious passions ready to break loose in all the strike troubles." Yes, verily.

The Times asks the government not "to delay in resolutely grappling, etc."

"Resolute grappling" is good. Walking into a powder room with a lighted candle is not so good. Gentlemen who have made their little pile and have it stored just above the powder room should be careful about their matches and their advice.

If you has a big, fat man living in the same room with you, and knew that his body, dead or alive, would always be in that room, you would want him to live. Dead men are unpleasant roommates. France, Germany and England live in the same room, geographically. England and France have decided, it seems, that Germany shall stay alive, instead of dying and decaying beside them.

The proposition is for England to forgive the debt of France, and for France and England to cut Germany's indemnity down to fifty thousand million gold marks, about twelve times what Bismarck took from France after the 1870 war.

President Harding tells mine owners he is sorry they will not accept his suggestion, arbitrate, and resume meanwhile.

Being sorry isn't enough. Mine owners will resume production if they believe President Harding means that coal shall be produced.

Mr. Harding, why not open those mines yourself? You can do it. The owners are too wise to resist you. Put the union men to work, instead of having the army shoot them. Let the people hire them. You couldn't run the mines with scabs. They don't know how, and you don't know how. Find out what coal really costs, at what price it ought to sell. You may find it isn't necessary to reduce workman's wages, only necessary to reduce mine owners' extortionate charges.

Eugene Debs advises the workers to fight. He says, "The crowd you fought for in the war would now shoot you down like dogs."

Mr. Debs changes his mind. He advised his friends not to fight in the late big war. If a job on the railroad is worth fighting for, you would think the whole United States would be worth fighting for.

However, this is the point. Mr. Debs understands mob psychology. And the government would be foolish, especially that part of it interested in the next election, if its deeds should seem to justify Mr. Debs' violent statement, and advice. Shooting should not begin with the government.

Forty-five years ago yesterday, Edison had what was called "a crazy idea." He was working on a machine for recording telegrams, to gain speed. He began working as a telegraph operator, you know. He noticed that a sound could be recorded, and reproduced. From that was born the phonograph and all the talking machines.

Don't neglect your crazy ideas. At least, don't let other people decide for you whether they are crazy or not.

Leah Silver had a baby. Various "charitable" institutions refused to take her or the baby. She left the sixteen months' old girl in a swamp. The mosquitoes nearly ate it. She was arrested, locked up. They haven't arrested the man yet. Now she is out on $2,500 bail and will soon have another baby. A sailor has offered to marry her, thanks to newspaper publicity.

What about the man? Stern morality says the mother deserves no consideration. But what about the baby, the one the mosquitoes nearly ate, and the new one?

A Frenchman, eighty years old, goes every morning to a little chapel to look on the face of his father, who died 37 years ago. Having obtained permission of civil and religious authorities, the man placed his father's body in a zinc coffin with a glass top. The coffin is filled with alcohol, and the body thus preserved. The face is said to have changed little. Fortunate is the man who in his memory retains the face

HILL CALLS GREENE A RASCAL

Marilynn Courted by Wire

MAIL TOO SLOW FOR JACK

15 Telegrams a Day and Long-Distance Calls Featured Pickford's Suit

By MARILYNN MILLER,
Star of "Sally" as told to Bert Ford of the Boston American staff and approved by her.

"Jack Pickford does not write love letters to me. He's too up-to-date and impulsive for that. He adopted the twentieth century method. He has conducted a courtship by wire—both telegraph and telephone.

"And operators have kept tabs. Ours has been no dimmed-parlor-sofa courtship, because the width of the continent has separated us most of the time.

"I've heard girl operators giggle over so many times, showing that they were listening-in while Jack and I were holding long distance tete-a-tete. The operators have had to be our confidentes. They've seen —or heard our courtship progress.

"You see, Jack sends me a flock of telegrams every day, often as many as fifteen. And he has telephoned clear from Los Angeles to Boston as many as four times a day, too, while I was playing in 'Sally.'

ONE CALL COST $87.50.

"We had a chat last Friday night and the toll was $87.50. Phone calls often run to $50 and over. Jack used to say that he wanted to hear my voice no matter what it cost. You see, I couldn't resort to love letters either. I had to answer by wire and Jack said he simply had to phone in between and learn how I was feeling.

"Wait for night letter rates? Not Jack. He shot me a telegram whenever the impulse seized him. I've developed a sort of telegram stare. I'm ripping open telegrams about every hour of the day. I got them at the Copley-Plaza and in my dressing room and they were as good as a tonic. Jack always had some nice, breezy thing to tell me.

CALLS HER "BABYFOOT."

"Have I got a pet name for Jack? No; I think just 'Jack' good enough. Yes, he's got one for me. He calls me 'Babyfoot.' He coined that early in our acquaintance. He admires my feet. He says he considers them shapely and pretty. That's how he hit upon 'Babyfoot' as a pet name.

WIDOW IN SOUTH END ROMANCE TO WED

MRS. ELIZABETH M. CLEM.

Mrs. Elizabeth M. Clem, who has filed intentions to wed John Dart, her carpenter sweetheart and the man she ejected from her home last Winter because he "didn't know how to love." "I was wrong," she now says. "John is a perfect lover." They're going to marry Monday.

The Dart that Cupid served Mrs. Elizabeth M. Clem, comely South End widow, was not to be denied.

He is John Dart, a carpenter.

Last Winter Cupid fitted John to his pliant bow and sing!—there was Mrs. Clem madly in love.

Then, in March, came an explosion that caused oodles of publicity.

On the eve of their marriage, and right after he had bought his beautiful fiancee a boarding house at No. 54 Upton street, John said he had been shown to the door; in fact, literally thrown out of the house.

Reporters rushed the pretty widow.

"Tsut so," they asked, breathlessly.

"It surely is," said Mrs. Clem, "why John didn't know how to make love."

"Given the gate," scribbled reporters—"bum lover."

But today there came to Boston's City Hall Mrs. Clem and John, rather Mrs. Clem on the arm of John, both beaming. Perched on John's shoulder was Kid Cupid, grinning. Dart, by all rights, should have been in Cupid's bowback, but he wasn't. He was giving Cupid a ride for a change. To the marriage license bureau moved the couple and there marriage intentions were filed.

John and his pretty bride-to-be will be married on Monday next at 10:30 a. m., at the Clarendon Street baptist Church. They will go on a honeymoon to New Hampshire, after which they will live in Medford, on John's salary, boarding houses now being history.

"Do I love him," asked Mrs. Clem today. "I'll say I do. John," she smiled, "is really the perfect lover but back in March I was rather peeved when I said he wasn't. You see, a lot of nosy folks caused a breach between us and I guess I was hasty.

"But, now, well," she blushed prettily and lowered her eye lids, "I intend to take good care of John."

"Lucky John," scribbled the reporter, dashing away.

FIND DIAMOND RING ON ALLEGED THIEF

Greenfield, July 19.—William Ryan, claiming New York city as his home, was arrested here when neighbors saw him prowling about the residences on Conway street. A search of the man's pockets revealed a $125 lady's diamond ring, a pawn check for $50 on a ring, and a child's savings bank which registered $3. As far as is known Ryan got nothing in Greenfield. He will be arraigned in district court on a vagrancy charge.

NEW CLEW IN SECRET BURIAL

Strange Conduct of Aged Woman Figures in Secret Burial at Woburn

Searching in the Port of Missing Persons for a clew to the possible identity of the body buried in "Grave 2, Left" in the Anshei Leibowitz plot of the Jewish cemetery at East Woburn, The Boston American came upon an interesting circumstance.

Whether there is any connection between what this newspaper found out and the body illegally buried at East Woburn cannot be determined until the corpse is disinterred. Chief of Police McCauley of Woburn said that this might take place today.

The body in the cemetery was buried in February. About that time an official at the North Station in Boston noticed an elderly woman who daily haunted the baggage department.

THOUGHT BODY OF BOY.

Attracted by her sorrowful appearance, he questioned her. She told him she lived in Boston and was expecting the body of her daughter, who had died in a nearby city. She burst into tears when he asked what had been the cause of the girl's death, and refused to tell him.

After a while she ceased to come. Her visits stopped at approximately the time the body was buried in the Jewish cemetery.

Yet the theory that the body might be that of the girl who died is set aside by a statement given to the American by Jacob Stanetsky, an undertaker.

He said that the dead caretaker of the cemetery told him when he first dug up the mysterious grave that he had removed the top of the box and peered into it. The caretaker told him, Stanetsky said, that the corpse looked like that of a boy.

Outside of these two clews, the cold hand of death is holding up the riddle of Grave 2, Left.

The principal witness is the corpse, buried under strange and sinister circumstances last February, with a driving snowstorm cloaking the activities of those who placed the plain pine coffin seven feet beneath the sod.

There is no record of the burial, no permit for the interment and no stone to mark the resting place of the mysterious occupant of the casket.

The second most important witness is also dead.

CARETAKER DROPS DEAD.

Harry Kreitzer, aged caretaker of the cemetery, dropped dead as he pointed an accusing finger at the man who led a funeral procession passing in front of his house as he was being questioned.

A moment before he had named a man as being responsible for the burial of the body without a permit. The person he named was Morris Goldhagen, an undertaker's assistant of Revere.

Even as the terrified old caretaker spoke the name, Goldhagen, leading

FALLS 312 FEET TO DEATH

Steeplejack Lands on Ladder, Which Passes Through His Chest

Falling 312 feet from the top of the steeple on the First Baptist Church, in Central Square, Cambridge, Edward Pickett, fifty-three years old, single, a steeplejack, was instantly killed today.

A ladder attached to the steeple was struck by his body. It hit the sidewalk beneath Pickett's body and passed through his chest.

Pickett roomed at Dale and Washington streets, Roxbury, and was employed by his cousin, Joseph Pickett of Cambridge.

COOL WEATHER FOR FEW DAYS

Fair weather for the next two or three days with seasonable temperatures was promised today by Weather Forecaster Smith. Less than a half an inch of rain fell in this section during the past twenty-four hours, while almost two and one-half inches fell at New York, and nearly an inch and one-quarter fell at Portland, Me., and Concord, N. H. The forecast: Fair and not much change in temperature tonight and Thursday, moderate west to northwest winds.

SEIZE HUGE LIQUOR PLANT

Lowell, Mass., July 19.—The largest liquor raid ever made in this vicinity was successfully accomplished by local police today when they broke into a two-tenement house in Campaw street and seized five stills in operation, ranging in capacity from fifty to 150 gallons. Seventy gallons of finished moonshine, fifteen barrels of mash and a vast quantity of other materials were confiscated. All partitions had been removed from two floors of the house, converting the dwelling into a mammoth moonshine plant.

CHARGES TRUSTEES FAILED IN DUTY

Investors' Counsel Bitterly Arraigns Men Identified With Promotion Companies

Henry Vincent Greene, ex-soda jerker and later conductor of million-dollar enterprises, was today branded in the Massachusetts Supreme Court as an "exposed swindler" and "a rascal."

Arthur D. Hill, former corporation counsel of Boston, acting on behalf of 60,000 investors in the many Greene companies in the $14,000,000 suit filed against the soda-clerk wizard and thirty-three officers in various companies, made the accusation in open court.

He flayed Greene and also the prominent men who had acted as trustees in several of the subsidiary companies of the H. V. Greene Corporation.

Referring to his part in the Greene companies Attorney Sherman L. Whipple today filed an affidavit in which he denied receiving any money or owning stock in any of the four companies mentioned in the suit. Mr. Whipple said he acted in the capacity of an attorney for men representing themselves as directors of the Commercial Finance Corporation seeking advice as to the jurisdiction of the Capital Issues Committee at Washington. He refused, he said, to assist them in securing a charter for a national bank.

DELAYS DECISION.

Acting upon the question of continuing the injunction obtained a week ago against Greene and the various companies, Judge Crosby took the matter under advisement, as he also did the question of appointing a receiver for the various Greene companies.

This ends for the time being the two days' legal storm that has centered about Henry Greene and the prominent men who acted as trustees in his companies. They include Sherman L. Whipple, Samuel L. Powers, former Congressman;

DIRECTORS FORCED GREENE TO DISCONTINUE SALE OF STOCK

SHERBURNE SAYS HE FOUND CAPITAL IMPAIRED

George A. Rich, secretary of the Boston Stock Exchange; General John H. Sherburne, World War hero; Patrick F. Sullivan, former president of the Bay State Street Railway Company, and others.

"These men were all fishing in muddy water," said Attorney Hill. "These gentlemen may talk about the purity of their intentions, about the public service that they believed they were rendering, but I don't care if their intentions were as pure as the driven snow; don't care what their motives were. The question is, did the course they pursued assist Green in continuing these frauds? You can't go into an H. V. Green enterprise without doing things you would later feel a sense of bitter shame for. The question of these defendants is indefensible, their arguments unreasonable."

"A HOUSE OF CARDS."

He referred to the Greene corporations as a "giant house of cards."

"Why," said Mr. Hill, "it has not been denied by any but Greene's personal counsel that fraud existed as long as Greene had anything to do with these corporations."

"From statements made here," said Justice Crosby, before announcing his decision to take the famous fight under advisement, "we may assume that the original plan of the Greene companies was a fraudulent scheme, detrimental to its stockholders."

General Sherburne arose and bitterly opposed the remark as did Greene's personal lawyer, but it was not withdrawn.

Referring to the voting trustees of the various Greene companies Attorney Hill said: "The fiduciary duty of these gentlemen was to curb Mr. Greene and possibly bring his activities to the attention of the police and the district attorney.

NEGLECT OF DUTY.

They treated Greene as if he was an honest man. It was that which constituted the misconduct on their part alleged in this bill. It was the failure on their part to do their full duty that we complain of and it was because of that failure that they became parties to the continuance of a fraudulent scheme and therefore in law they became parties to the conspiracy.

"They allowed Greene to exchange worthless stock in the H. V. Greene Company for comparatively good stock in other companies. No effective means were taken by these men to stop the same kind of fraud that had previously taken place.

"They even sent out reports which were liable to cause stockholders in the Commercial Finance Corporation to exchange comparatively good shares in that corporation for worthless ones in the H. V. Greene Company."

SHERBURNE BLAMES GREENE.

Blame for the difficulties of the four companies dominated by Greene was laid directly to the nut sundae promoter today by General Sherburne.

He preceded his testimony in court by a statement that the troubles of the Mutual Finance Corporation and the Commercial Finance Corporation had caused him much anguish of mind and a depletion of his personal resources to the point where it has been necessary for him to borrow money.

Questioned by Justice Crosby, he said that of $4,100,000 paid in by the public to the Mutual and Commercial corporations, there was left only $1,800,000 in liquid assets, together with what he considered were good claims totalling $300,000, which the corporations expected to collect.

"What percentage of their investments could be returned to stockholders if the litigation were to end?" asked the court.

EXPECTS TO PAY ALL.

Sherburne explained that the par value of shares in both companies was $50. He said:

"Right now we could pay back $32.40 per share on the Mutual stock and $21.25 a share on the Commercial stock. If the suit against Greene is successful we hope and expect to pay back 100 cents on the dollar."

Describing the manner in which he became associated with the Greene enterprises he said:

"In 1920 I was commissioner at the State House. I had been in conference with Mr. Curtis on the subject of fly-by-night promoters, in March, when I received a visit from Mr. Greene. He told me that he and his companies were being attacked by the Financial Journal. Greene claimed that both the Mutual and the Commercial corporations were in excellent financial shape; that there was 100 per cent. of the assets in the treasuries of the companies, and that they were in solid shape all the way. He added that in order to satisfy financial interests of Boston, he would permit an auditor to go over the books of the companies.

"I took the matter up with certain bankers and in this manner was brought before the stockholders' committee and became associated with an auditor named Ried. I think, was appointed by the First National Bank, and he went over the books. His audit showed that $1,000,000 had been paid in to the two companies.

CAPITAL DEPRECIATED.

"Practically all of this money had been paid out on notes for the purchase of automobiles.

"After the audit had been made I was informed that the affairs of the companies looked pretty bad. Then I took off my coat and went to work in earnest. I found that the capital had depreciated approximately fifty per cent., and told this to my advisers. I notified Greene and we had a lengthy conference. I suggested to him that former Congressman Samuel L. Powers would be a good man to straighten things out.

"Greene adopted my suggestion. During July and August Mr. Powers tried to help me straighten things out. Mr. Powers laid down the law to Greene. He told him that unless the company were properly reorganized a receiver should take over the two businesses. It was about that time that the Ponzi thing broke. It was deemed inadvisable in view of that and because of the condition of the liquid assets of the corporations to appoint a receiver at the time.

"We added George S. Baldwin of Brookline, now dead, to the committee of stockholders. The first month we were occupied practically entirely with chasing collections. We were so busy doing this that it was said we were responsible for the failure of Massachusetts Motors. We got $150,000 in collections in various Massachusetts cities.

GREENE RELEASED CONTROL.

"The stockholders' committee was only a temporary expediency. In September the Attorney-General entered the picture. He knew what was being done and seemed satisfied with what we were doing, unedr the circumstances.

"In the early stages, we realized that one of the most imperative things to do was to curtail the activities of Mr. Greene. We went after him, and in February he gave up voting control of both companies to Herbert Parker, Sherman Whipple and Mr. Powers. Since then Greene has had no control over the companies.

"The new board of directors included Mr. Currier, Mr. Powers, George Rich, secretary of the Boston Stock Exchange, and Patrick F. Sullivan. About this time we got 120 motor trucks and thirty autos in New York. With motors seized in Boston, we were forced to sell these cars on a falling market.

"On September 5, 1921, Mr. Rich and I, as a majority of the sub-committee of the board of directors, reported to stockholders that liquidation and return of assets had been advised.

BLOCKED SCHEME OF H. V.

"Subsequently, however, we made some excellent investments and declared a dividend. In the past six months we have earned 5 per cent. more than all expenses."

Questioned at this point by Justice Crosby, General Sherburne said that the bulk of the assets of the companies were in cash and notes.

"There has been some inuendo," he said, "in the bill filed, to the effect that there was a change of stock between Greene's other two companies and the Mutual and Commercial. Greene tried to do this, but he was prevented. Three days after Greene's letter, in which he suggested it, he was instructed by the stockholders' committee to cease trying to sell stock in the companies.

"I hope Your Honor is convinced of our good faith in all of these proceedings. None of the directors got any compensation for their services except the $5 that was paid each director for attending the weekly meetings. There was no personal profit in it for any of us. Of course there was some legal work by my firm and Mr. Powers, but we charged fees that were much lower than the usual ones.

DENIES CONSPIRACY.

"Personally, I went into the thing to render public service. I did nothing that was not to the interest of the stockholders. None of us tried to feather our own nests. We have not been and are not engaged in any conspiracy to defraud them of their money. We have tried, on the contrary, to see that their money would be returned to them. It has in no way been an effort to get personal graft. If your honor wishes, I will take a personal oath to all the statements I have made.

"From the day I found impairment of the capital of these two corporations Greene was ordered to stop the sale of stock and no stock was sold thereafter as original stock."

Sherman L. Whipple, one of the defendants in the suit against Greene and his four companies, appeared with an affidavit in which he denied receiving any money or owning any stock in any of the four companies.

In July, 1918, he said, he was approached by men who represented themselves as directors of the Commercial Finance Corporation. They approached him in his capacity of attorney to ask his opinion as to the jurisdiction of the Capital Issues Committee at Washington over selling subscriptions for capital stock of their company. Later, he said, they asked him to assist them in securing a charter for a national bank. They represented that the charter was desired and approved he said, by important business and financial interests of Boston. For his opinion in reference to the Washington committee's jurisdiction he received $1,000, and he declined to assist them in the matter of the charter. That, the affidavit stated, was all that he had to do with the company, receiving no other "fees, salaries, compensation, payment or money of any kind."

Attorney George L. Mayberry, counsel for the defendants, said that the conditions complained of occurred before the new board of directors was formed. The new body, he said, compelled Greene to stop the sale of stock, made him give up his voting control and started a suit against him to recover. He said the bill in equity filed against the thirty-five defendants he represented was full of reckless allegations and charges of fraud which were not even mentioned in the bill.

Greene Imported Sleuth From Scotland Yard

Henry Vincent Greene, the jerker of soda suda, once engaged a Scotland Yard detective to guard the elaborate Greene offices at No. 25 Huntington avenue.

The boy who once looked after ice cream packs, soda flavoring and shook the "meanest malted milk" in Roxbury didn't think much of secret service men in the United States.

Sherlock Holmes," he said to his ad-

"I have always been interested in mixing confidential secretary. "I think the British must have the greatest detectives in the world. Cable to London, ole top, and order me the best man in Scotland Yards."

Eventually there loomed before Henry on the velvet rug of the "President's Suite" a mannered individual who used H's lavishly and leaned on slender bamboo cane.

Into Henry's eyes crept the light of hero worship.

"You're hired," cried he. "You are to watch my safes every night; to see that no one disturbs the fortunes they contain."

The gentleman from the "Yards," as they say in London, went to work guarding two huge safety deposit vaults and lived the "Life of Riley" according to a private watchman who spent many evenings chatting with him.

He "yessed" Henry into having an elaborate electrical "silent detective" system installed in the Greene offices whereby any visitor from the time the office closed at night until 9 a. m. the following morning was registered, in addition to ringing a burglar gong. That is a hand on a doorknob immediately registered on an electrically-controlled dial, a footstep on a floor was registered; in fact the system was almost human.

SEEK AUTOISTS WHO INJURED AGED MAN

Raynham Centre, July 19.—Chester Hall, sixty years old, of No. 24 Riverside street, Brockton, was seriously injured when an automobile struck a team he was driving. The impact threw him to the ground and caused the horse to bolt. The animal was found dead three miles from the scene of the accident, having died from exhaustion. Hall was taken to the Morton Hospital, Taunton. The automobilists sped away. The police are looking for them.

DEDHAM WOMAN WHO SHOT SELF IS DEAD

Mrs. Marion Mahnewsky, who shot herself with a revolver in her home at Dedham on July 10, while mentally depressed, is dead at the Massachusetts General Hospital. She was forty-five years old. Mrs. Mahnewsky was found by her husband when he came home from work a short time later.

MOTHER SUES SON AND HIS WIFE TO BALK EVICTION

DUPED BY PAIR, SHE CLAIMS

Dorchester Woman Says They Induced Her to Give Up Share in Home

Mrs. Caroline G. Braser has brought a bill in equity in the Superior Court to prevent her son and daughter-in-law Mr. and Mrs. Lyman H. Brazer, from evicting her from the home which they all occupy at No. 38 Bloomfield street, Dorchester.

The mother, in her petition, points out that "I always supported my son until he was able to take care of himself," and adds that she put more money into the purchase of their home than he did.

MARRIAGE MADE CHANGE.

In 1918, Mrs. Brazer said, her son was single. The two then pooled their resources and purchased the Bloomfield street residence, she said, her son contributing $1,650 while she put in $2,600. They made their home together there, and lived amicably until last Fall.

Then, according to her petition, Brazer was married. He brought his wife, Mrs. Bertha L. Brazer, to live with them, the mother said. All of the furniture in the house, she added, was her own.

Shortly after the son's marriage, she said, the son and his wife proposed to her that the property be put in their names, and that she deed the house to them. If she did so, they promised, she would always be given a home and supported by them, and would be treated with every consideration.

WAS TREATED COLDLY.

But soon after this proposal was accepted, and the young people had come into entire possession of the property, Mrs. Brazer claims that the attitude of son and daughter-in-law changed.

Evidences of love and affection ceased, she said, and she was treated coldly and with disrespect. Then they refused to allow her to use the house as her own, she added, and finally threatened to evict her.

Mrs. Brazer's bill asks that the defendants be enjoined from evicting her, and that they be restrained from selling the house or any of the furniture. She also asks an accounting by the court, asks that a commission be appointed to sell the property and distribute the proceeds, and that the defendants be ordered to turn over the furniture to her.

MINIATURE FLOOD IN DORCHESTER

Thousands of gallons of water shot high in the air in the Cushing avenue, Hancock and Jerome street section of Dorchester when an automobile broke off a hydrant near its base. For more than an hour and a half the geyser spouted, turning the highway into veritable rivers in which the youngsters of the neighborhood bathed.

Neither Elijah or the Compass Appears in Court

Elijah Grant, the "crew" of the Charley and Willie, who fell overboard with the skipper's compass and was sentenced to dive for the compass when he was in court last week, was to be in court today with the compass right in his hands. But dogone if he showed up, so a default warrant was issued for his arrest.

Meantime, the Charley and Willie, they say, is out on the briny.

BOMB HOME OF R. I. MILL WORKER

Providence, July 19.—Edward Hawkinson of Crompton, a striker in the velvet mill there, who returned to work on Monday, was blown from his bed, and his family badly frightened, when a bomb planted beneath his home in New London avenue exploded.

Every window in the house was splintered, doors blown from hinges and the family thrown from their beds in terror. Neighbors ran into the street and firemen, police and militia were summoned.

It was the fourth recent explosion in the Pawtucket Valley mill strike troubles which started early last Winter. No trace of the bomber has been found, but police are investigating the recent finding of a quantity of dynamite in a barber shop, operated by the brother of Guiseppe Nadella, former secretary of the Pawtucket Valley local of the Amalgamated Textile Union. Police raided the barber shop at Oakland beach for liquor and found the dynamite. In the rear of the home of a relative of Nadella, police also found a quantity of dynamite.

FREE TRIPS TO NANTASKET FOR 15,000

Fifteen thousand mothers and children can make the trip to Nantasket Beach next week as guests of the Boston American. Three thousand persons a day will be carried to the famous shore resort on the boats of the Nantasket Steamboat Company.

And it's all on the Boston American.

Just clip the coupons that appear in the Boston American daily and when you have three, dated consecutively, exchange them for a boat ticket at one of the many agencies to be announced in Thursday's paper.

Be sure and get aboard the big Nantasket steamers when the decks hands lower the gang plank and leave Rowes Wharf.

And kids—the mates and officers and crew of the ships are going to tell you all about how the big engine works. You can explore the lower regions of the boat to your heart's content.

All the rules and regulations regarding running, jumping, etc., which were made by the steamboat officials will be forgotten for the five days during which the excursions will be held.

LID OFF FOR WEEK.

The lid will be off as soon as young Boston steps aboard and it won't be on again until the last trip has been completed on July 28.

Make these next excursions real winners. Pack the boats to capacity every day. And when you arrive at the beach let off all that surplus energy you've been saving for so long.

Remember when dad and mother first visited the famous shore resort and watched the surf breaking all alone in behalf It's the same old story over again.

Take little Johnnie and Mary down on that excursion. Just clip a coupon from the paper every day and after you have obtained three consecutively dated coupons from them, together with 10 cents, at any of the distributing stations listed tomorrow, and you're entitled to one ticket to Nantasket Beach and return.

TWO BOATS DAILY.

The Boston American excursions to Nantasket have been suspended for several years because of the war. This is the second week this year that is to be practically given over to the wondrous events.

So many mothers, tired and weary from the drudgery, wanted to make the journey that it was almost impossible to get them all aboard. So popular was the idea that the excursions will be run on Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday of next week.

The excursions will leave Rowe's Wharf every day.

Tags will be given out and they will serve as passwords all along the line. Every policeman on the Nantasket Beach Reservation will take pains to see that the wearer of the tag doesn't stray away or get hurt.

GET COUPON TODAY.

Dig in the sand to your heart's content. Prowl around the beach, go in swimming and enjoy yourself. The boat will leave early enough to get the mothers home in time to get dad's supper.

So when pop isn't looking tonight, creep up and get the coupon section of the Boston American and start your collection for the free ride to Nantasket. The first boat leaves Monday morning next.

1,100 FOOLED IN OIL STOCK DEAL BY COX

Washington, July 19 (By International News Service).—The Federal Trade Commission today ordered E. J. Cox and his wife, N. E. Cox of Houston, Texas, to discontinue "false representations in connection with the sale of stocks and securities" of the Prudential Oil and Refining Company, the Prudential Security Oil Company and the General Oil Company. Eleven hundred persons, the commission set forth, "were probably misled and deceived in the purchase of several companies promoted and controlled by Mr. and Mrs. Cox."

AUSTRALIAN CHAMPS TO PLAY IN BOSTON

Conventions will be held in the following New England cities: Portland, September 16; New Haven, February 27; Providence, June 7; Boston, July 18; Rutland, Vt., August 10, and Portsmouth, N. H., August 26.

PROSPECTS OF RAIL PEACE IMPROVE

By the Associated Press

Washington, July 19. — Administration officials awaited with confidence today the response of State executives and coal operators and miners to the government's determination to secure a resumption of coal production notwithstanding the continued strike of mine workers.

Railway strike peace parleys at Chicago assumed new and more important proportions today, with possibility of the walkout of 400,000 maintenance of way men virtually removed by the action of the Railroad Labor Board in indicating that it would grant new hearings on the wage question. Rules affecting overtime pay of the shopmen, and the question of the restoration of seniority rights to men now on strike were left as about the only issues. It was not believed the latter question would prove a stumbling block.

Meanwhile, plans went forward in the coal strike to put the government fully in a position to fulfill the pledge of "every assistance at its command" given by President Harding in the telegram addressed to the Governors of twenty-eight coal States.

Assertion that the President's message to the Governors was merely a gesture which will not produce coal in any substantial quantity, was made by John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers, and a similar prediction was made by Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor.

Governors of Kentucky, Iowa, Georgia and Colorado, promptly upon receipt of President Harding's telegram urging co-operation in obtaining reopening of the coal mines, wired that the Federal government could depend upon them to the fullest extent, according to news dispatches.

The governor of Kansas telegraphed that the policy suggested was being followed in his State. Governor Mechem of New Mexico replied that all mines in that State were operating. Governor Pat M. Neff of Texas, on a campaign tour, had not received the President's message and would not comment.

U. S. Troops at Camp Devens Ready to Move at Once

Major General Clarence R. Edwards, commanding the First Army Corps Area, and the 181st Infantry Brigade at Camp Devens in readiness to move at once should they be called upon for action in the coal or railroad strikes.

The brigade, which comprises of the 5th and 13th Infantry regiments, has a present-time complement of 1,500 regulars.

General Edwards has for the past week given orders to watch the strike situation, acting on orders from the War Department at Washington.

Senator Lodge in Plea for Law and Order

Washington, July 19.—In the present coal strike crisis "it seems the plainest and most absolute duty of all patriotic Americans to sustain the President when he is standing for law, order and justice, precious above all else to the people of the United States," Senator Henry Cabot Lodge of Massachusetts declared in a formal statement today.

"No minority of the people no matter how highly organized can be allowed to control the government of all the people," the Senator declared.

A. F. of L. Asks All Unions to Support Rail Strikers

By International News Service.

Washington, July 19.—Workers throughout the United States were formally appealed to today by the executive council of the American Federation of Labor to actively support in every way the striking railroad workers.

The appeal went by unanimous vote of the council to every labor organization in the United States, to every labor publication and to every organized labor man through Federation organizers.

WOMAN SLASHER HELD FOR GRAND JURY

Charged with stabbing in the face of her upstairs neighbor with a jackknife after an argument over the ownership of a clothespole, Mrs. Frances Kadas of Garfield avenue, Hyde Park, was ordered held for the grand jury in bond of $500, after her arraignment in the West Roxbury court today on a charge of assault and battery. The injured woman, Mrs. Helen Jakowski, appeared in court with her head swathed in bandages.

GOT NEWTON TICKETS TWO IN COURT

Joseph Van Tassell, nineteen, of Bigelow street, Newton, and James McFarland, sixteen, of Chauncey street, Brighton, were arraigned today charged with the larceny of $37 from the ticket office of the Newton depot.

They were ordered to make restitution of the stolen money. Van Tassell was placed on probation and McFarland was given a suspended sentence of three months in the House of Correction.

Flapper Discovers Being "Sally" on Hot Day Ain't the Bee's Buzz

Put your pennies on the drum, on the drum, on the drum. Being a Salvation Army Lass on a hot day is not exactly the bee's buzz—but let the good work go on. Corp number One's gonna get a new drum with the kopeks and pfennigs I picked up at Pemberton Squa re last night. Sa'ong of the Salva-shun Ar-mee!

The sun, after an unusually mean day's work, was lazily dropping behind the courthouse on Pemberton square. Loiterers with handkerchiefs stuck in their collars stood about with their mouths open, life fish out of water. It was the end of a burning day.

Lieutenant Jamie Cokshutt, buttoned up to the neck in all-wool serge, threw back her head and gave the signal to holler:

"At the cross, at the cross
Where I first saw the light
And the burning of my heart
Rolled away ra-ill d'away—"

We were all singing for all we had in us. Even I. For the Salvation Army, like the Ziegfeld Follies doesn't insist upon a rip-snortin' voice if you're otherwise qualified for your part.

Spang, spang, spang! went the tambourine.
BOOM, BOOM, BOOM! went the drum.
Clink, clink, clink! went the cymbals.

"Why'n't cha keep it up?" I asked Lieutenant Madeline Hill between songs. "You were goin' louder'n any of us."

THEY GET THE CROWD.

"Little boy," gasped Lieutenant Madge, whose cornet had gone dumb, "see him? Sucking lemons. Makes my mouth water an' I can't play—the little rascal."

"Are you wah-aw-ushed
Are you wah-aw-ushed
Are you washed in the blood of the Lamb —"

We were off again. Louder and louder we sang, whanging away at the tambourines. Closer and closer pressed the crowd.

A queer crowd. Men who'd be uncomfortable in plush padded pews. Ragged urchins who couldn't be dragged into church with a forty-mule team. A little bent scrub-woman who never finds time for systematic devotions. These, and a sprinkling of what the star reporter calls flotsam and jetsam, whatever that means.

IGNORE HEAT TO PLEAD.

Some of our audience openly jostled for space at the ringside. Others, within comfortable listening distance leaned against cigar store windows, pretending they weren't with us.

With a final crash of brass our song ended and Lieutenant Jamie stepped out from the others and started to talk.

With earnest eyes and strained voice she made her plea. Waves of heat rose from the cobblestones and hit her in the face. Several who had only stayed to hear the band remembered they were going some place and shoved off.

"Now, now, now, is the time for salvation," her young voice insisted. "Not tomorrow—now!"

DRUNK PRAISES SONGS.

A gent with eyes like soft-boiled eggs interrupted, teetering on uncertain toes:

"Wish you'd shing tha' shong again," he wheedled. "I drunther hear the shongs, shister. How about it?"

How about it? Lieutenant Jamie stopped in the middle of a word and burst into song:

"Throw out the li'fline
Throw out the li'fline —"

A few warning drops of water plumped down on the leader's upturned nose, but she sang on. So did the rest of us.

Larger, oftener drops—but on we sang. Little streams started to trickle down the inside of the horns, but the Salvation soldiers continued to play—a little thickly, but with undampened pepper.

NO TIME TO WEAKEN.

And then it started to RAIN. Jamie picked up an umbrella and opened it without losing a note. At the end of the song she invited her listeners to "follow on" to the mission house. The bozo with the four-minute eyes was first in line.

"You must be all in," I said, sympathetically, as I dragged my long, heavy army uniform along with me over the sidewalk.

"I don't have time to get tired," returned Jamie. "Starting in early in the morning, visiting the poor, selling 'War-crys' all afternoon, this at night—why, I can't stop to be all in. I'm too busy.

"It's a great life," added Jamie, "if you don't find time to weaken!"

CHARGE NEGLECT OF CHILDREN

Agents for the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children had William Imawke and his wife Sophie of No. 95 Lowell street in Municipal Court today charged with idleness and neglect of their children. Testimony was given that neither would work and that in the last month or two sixty drunks had been taken out of their home by police. The woman was discharged with a warning, the man given a suspended sentence of six months.

HELD IN $1,000 AFTER ARREST AS DRUNK

Timothy J. McCarthy of No. 93 George street, Roxbury, his face battered with a brick and, according to the police, in a mean mood from bad liquor, was arrested on Norfolk street, Roxbury, after a stormy session with passersby who resented his remarks.

At the police station McCarthy said his name was "John," but it later developed that it was "Timothy" and that he was the same individual who defaulted on a charge of drunkenness last year. He was ordered held in $1,000 for a hearing next Tuesday.

BILL TO RETURN GOUGER'S FINES

Washington, July 19. — Passage of a bill by Senator Elkins, Republican, West Virginia, to remit the fines of persons convicted during the war of profiteering in food has been recommended by the Department of Justice to the Senate Claims Committee, to which the Elkins bill has been referred. Robert H. Lovett, assistant Attorney-General, has written the committee, indorsing the Elkins bill, advising the legislation, in view of the fact that the Supreme Court declared void a section of the Food Control Act under which fines or $277,000 were imposed.

"CAGE BABY" TAKEN FROM SAUGUS HOME

The "caged in" baby of Saugus, eighteen-months-old Edward Cushing, has been removed from the home of Mrs. Emma Redding at No. 714 Broadway. James E. Fee, superintendent of the State Board of Charity, in removing the child, said that Mrs. Redding was not guilty of cruel and abusive treatment.

and the voice of a father worthy of veneration. And most unfortunate he to whom a father's name and memory mean little.

A Pennsylvania justice fined two aviators $1 each for "flying over a man's land without getting his permission." They didn't alight, simply flew over. But, the learned justice says that he who owns land owns down to the centre of the earth, and up into the air as high as heaven, and you must not trespass.

This would be a good time to establish single tax above ground at least and let the people own the air.

Some of these days, if the people want it, the land single tax will be established, not by confiscation, which would be foolish, or by purchase, which would be too expensive, but by declaring that all land shall be the property of the government one hundred years after date. That would injure nobody, for a ninety-nine years' lease is worth as much as the freehold property. It would solve all taxation problems simply, one hundred years from the set date.

PLANES IN USE AGAINST IRISH IRREGULARS

Dublin, July 19 (By International News Service).—A squadron of five battle planes is now assisting the advance of the Free State troops through Southern Ireland, it was announced today. The aviators are used chiefly for scout duty and to direct the movements of the regular soldiers.

Although outnumbered in many places, the regulars continue to throw back the rebels all along the line. The Free Staters now hold the line running through New Ross, Kilkenny, Nenagh and Thurles.

Civil life in Limerick is at a standstill as the result of fighting in that city. Sniping is continuous. Many buildings have been wrecked.

Irregulars are ravaging the country, burning barracks and commandeering supplies.

Heavy Fighting Is Reported in Limerick

Dublin, July 19 (By the Associated Press).—News reaching Dublin today confirms earlier reports that heavy fighting occurred in Limerick over the week end, the National Army troops succeeding in isolating the Irregulars in the Strand barracks and King John Castle. Capitulation of the insurgents is believed imminent.

The Nationalists, operating in armored cars, poured a hail of bullets into the barracks and also used hand grenades.

It is known the casualties of the insurgents include six killed, but it is difficult to learn definitely the number of killed and wounded.

A traveler from Cork brought information that Irregulars there were making preparations to defend Cork city. Hotel visitors have been turned out of their quarters and only allowed to take few personal belongings.

NAMES PROBERS OF ANTI-JUDAISM

In compliance with the laws passed by the last session of the Legislature, Governor Cox today appointed the members of the special commission that will investigate the opportunities for higher education in this State, including the alleged anti-Jew discrimination at Harvard College.

To this commission, Governor Cox appointed President Lemuel H. Murlin of Clark University, Mrs. Marion C. Baker of Concord, former president of the Massachusetts Federation of Women's Clubs; Carlton D. Richardson of West Brookfield, Felix Vorenberg of Boston, Jeremiah E. Driscoll of the Boston Central Labor Union and Hector Bellebe of Fall River.

Governor Cox appointed on the commission to investigate unemployment, former Secretary of State Albert P. Langtry, William H. Coburn of Brookline and Miss Sibyl H. Holmes of Boston.

William S. Felton of Salem, Joseph S. Pike of Somerville and Ernest H. Vaughan of Worcester were named to the committee to consider municipal expenditures.

Governor Cox requested Mark E. Smith as clerk of the Charlestown District Court.

MORE MONEY FOR NEW AIRDOME

President Edmund Longley of the Chamber of Commerce, and Mayor Curley will hold a conference today on the question of laying water mains to the new airdrome in East Boston, which is at present under construction. The State has already contributed $35,000 for the making of the field. Mr. Longley stated that this sum was short some $9,000, which the Chamber of Commerce would pay to fix up the field if the city would pay $4,000 for the water main. Mayor Curley agreed to do this, saying that "nothing should interfere with this work."

MARILYNN DENIES SHE IS ILL; WILL WED PICKFORD AUGUST 1

FAMILY IS HAPPY AT MATCH

He uses it in telegrams and over the phone and I sign telegrams that way at times or just plain 'Marilynn.' There are two n's in Marilynn, but my manager chopped one off to make it fit electric signs.

"It's been lots of fun—our wire courtship. And I've saved all Jack's telegrams. Fill a trunk. Too sacred and precious to both of us to make them public.

"Often, owing to unfavorable weather conditions, it has been difficult to make ourselves heard over that 3,500 miles or more of wire. Friday and Saturday of last week Jack's voice sounded as if he were at the North Pole. He said my voice sounded exasperatingly weak too.

"But there have been calls when he sounded as if he were telephoning from a suburb and it seemed much nicer because it brought him nearer to me.

AN ARDENT LOVER.

"He lots off the cutest messages at times. Jack is an ardent lover. He is attentive and considerate. These are traits a girl likes in a fiance. Jack wires orders for flowers every day too. I have orchids on my dresser daily, thanks to Jack's thoughtfulness and I carry them with me to the theatre and back.

"He has given me many choice gifts. He is constantly doing something or sending something which proves how much I am in his thoughts, despite the fact that he is a very busy young man these days, preparing 'Six-Cylinder Love' which will be his next picture after 'Garrison's Finish.'

"As a reflect on it, I think Jack's tenderness and thoughtfulness and his unobtrusive manner helped win love Jack with whom I was half in love before I ever met him, thanks to my late husband's admiration for him.

DENIES SHE IS ILL.

"Stories of my illness and Sister Claire's romance are false. More propaganda circulated by enemies. My sister has a husband and as for me being too ill to marry on August 1, that is about as silly as other rumors, so silly, in fact, as to be scarcely worthy of notice.

"I was treated by Dr. Andreas Christian of Marlboro street during the eleven weeks 'Sally' played in Boston, as I have every time I come to Boston, but for slight knee trouble and not any organic illness. I threw my knee-cap out in New York and when I work it too hard at times it is apt to stiffen.

"Treatment by Dr. Christian kept my knee in perfect trim. It was more of a precaution than a necessity, but I see that mountains have been made out of it, even to stretching into a sufficient cause for postponing my wedding to Jack Pickford.

"We have set August 1 as the date and I shall become Jack Pickford's wife on that day, barring accident. I shall leave New York for the coast on Friday, June 21. That will give me a few days to rest and get ready.

MA PICKFORD'S MESSAGE.

"As I have stated before, the ceremony will be a simple white wedding and it will take place in Beverly Hills, the home of Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Fairbanks on the outskirts of Los Angeles. Here is a telegram which just arrived from Jack's mother. It reads:

"'I wish to tell the Boston American that the Pickford family is delighted at the coming marriage of Miss Miller and Jack and we all admire her loyalty in the stand she has taken in his defence. The wedding will take place August 1 at Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Fairbanks' home in Beverly Hills. Only members of both families will be present. After the wedding Jack and Marilynn are planning to make a motor tour of California.

"Mrs. Charlotta Pickford."

RETURN EAST TOGETHER.

"I was delighted to have Jack come to Boston in June. We spent many happy days together, but his visit was too brief. I can scarcely wait for the train to reach Los Angles. I had a very hard season. I am naturally rather tired, but to say I am ill is absurd.

"Jack will return East with me. "Sally" is slated to reopen in Boston September 1. I expect to greet my friends in Boston within six weeks as 'Mrs. Jack Pickford.' Sounds good—'Mrs. Jack Pickford.'"

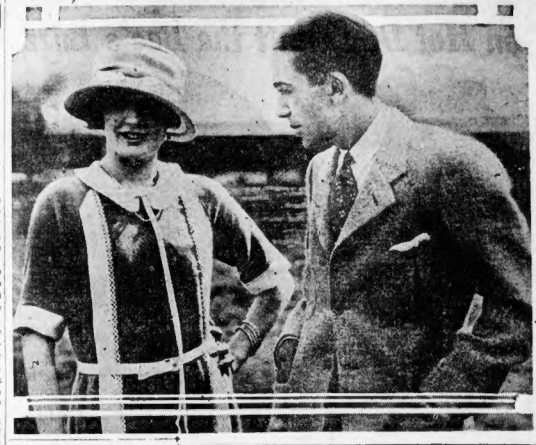
'MA,' JACK AND MARILYNN



Pickford Plans to Sue Flo Ziegfeld

Los Angeles, July 19.—Jack Pickford, busy on location today, incident to the filming of a new race track picture, in which he is starring, said positively that he and Miss Marilynn Miller, "Sally" star, would be married August 1, at the Beverly Hills home of Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Fairbanks.

Pickford said also that Dennis O'Brien, his personal counsel, is contemplating legal action against Ziegfeld for remarks he is said to have indulged in, all derogatory to Pickford and Miss Miller.

He said:

"I really can't say why Ziegfeld has been talking as he has. But I know he has been talking ever since Marilynn's engagement to me was announced. Now Billie Burke, his wife, is reported to have joined.

"In behalf of Miss Miller and myself I won't stand his alleged talk, because it is entirely unfair and unjust."

TO BURY SLAYER AND VICTIM SIDE BY SIDE

Passaic, N. J., July 19.—Plans have been made to bury fourteen-year-old Sadie Barnett, who was shot to death by her uncle Isadore Barnett, as she lay asleep in bed and her slayer side by side in the Hills cemetery here. Barnett, who was twenty-eight years old, after the shooting turned the pistol upon himself and died soon afterward in a hospital. Barnett's act was caused by his realization that he could never marry the girl.

SEN. HITCHCOCK IS AGAIN NOMINATED

Omaha, Neb., July 19 (By the Associated Press).—Senator G. M. Hitchcock and H. B. Howell, Republican National Committeeman, were nominated at yesterday's State-wide primaries as Democratic and Republican candidates, respectively for United States Senator. Senator Hitchcock's victory was sweeping. The race between Dan B. Butler, Omaha, and Charles W. Bryan, brother of William Jennings Bryan, for the Democratic Gubernatorial nomination, showed Butler leading with slightly more than one-third of the State heard from.

NUMBER OF DEAF MUTES DECREASES

Washington, July 19.—Although the number of deaf and dumb persons enumerated in the 1920 census, 44,885, showed a slight increase above the 1910 figure, the rate per million of population decreased from 486 to 425, the census bureau announced today. This fact, also noted, in European countries, was attributed in large measure to advanced treatment for children's diseases.

AIRSHIP CARRYING AIRSHIP IS LATEST

London, July 19 (By International News Service).—The government has concluded successful tests with airplane carrying gairships, according to the Daily Express today. During the tests airplanes were launched from the "Mother" airship, the newspaper said.

COAL VERY SHY; EXACT AMOUNT IN DOUBT

Washington, July 19. (By International News Service).—The nation's coal bin is alarmingly low, more than it has ever been in recent years, but beyond these facts, government bureaus professed today to have no actual statistics as to the amount of coal on hand. The railroads are believed to be getting perilously low. The geological survey estimated 16,000,000 tons were held by railways on March 1.

At normal consumption this is but forty-five days' supply. Thousands of tons of coal are loaded in cars and standing along tracks in the United States delayed by shortage of motive power.

Washington, July 19.—Ten thousand union maintenance miners now engaged as stationary engineers and the police to help find him. Francis disappeared after delivering morning papers over a West Medford route. He wore corduroy trousers, light blue shirt, brown shoes and no stockings.

COST OF SUGAR BEING KEPT HIGH

By Cosmopolitan News Service.

Washington, July 19.—The American public is being made to pay millions of dollars for sugar on the theory that the world crop of sugar is short, and that much of the refined American sugar must be sent abroad. The price of sugar has risen steadily from less than five cents per pound wholesale to between six and seven cents, with the end not yet in sight.

Great quantities of Cuban sugar have come in to the country and are being held here in stock, with the price of Cuban sugar being more or less steadily depressed and held at a low level.

Cuban sugar brought into the United States up until July fifth amounted to 1,985,998 tons. For the corresponding period a year ago the imports into the United States of Cuban sugar amounted to 1,084,990 tons. Of this increase in imports, amounting to nearly a hundred per cent., the great bulk is held in the refineries—not put on the American market.

On the other hand, because of the concerted rush to export American sugar on one pretext or another, the stocks of sugar in refineries are more than 500,000 tons short of what they were a year ago.

Reports have been circulated that the best sugar crop of Europe is in a bad way and that an acute need for sugar exists which must be met by exporting American sugar, while the cheaper Cuban sugar lies idle in stock. Thus the price of sugar for home consumption goes galloping gayly upward and upward.

American exports up to July 5 reached the total of 450,000 tons. For the same period last year exports amounted to 126,000 tons.

PRIZE CONTEST FOR CHILDREN UNDER 15

The American Committee for the Relief of Russian children, with Boston offices at No. 31 Mount Vernon street, announces a prize essay contest for all children in the city under fifteen years of age, in connection with the drive it is making to secure milk for the children of Russia.

A $10 gold piece will be given to the boy who submits the best essay on "Why Russian Babies Must Have Milk," while a similar award will be made to the winning girl. Essays must be submitted by Saturday morning.

A mass meeting will be held on the Common Saturday morning in aid of the drive.

REPORT OF LENINE DEATH STILL PERSISTS

Stockholm, July 19 (By the Associated Press).—Notwithstanding the denial issued by the Soviet embassy at Riga yesterday of the statement made by the Riga correspondent of the Svenska Dagbladet, that he had been reliably informed Premier Lenine of Soviet Russia had been poisoned, the correspondent today telegraphed his newspaper here from Riga that he had obtained confirmation of his statement. Cyanide of potassium was the poison used, the correspondent affirms.

SHERIFFS BREAK UP MINERS' ATTACK

Washington, Pa., July 19.—Sheriff to Duellen and a detachment of State police today dispersed a mob of striking miners assembled a second time to attack the Wilson Mine at Cokeburg Junction. Some of the men were firing shots at the mine when the officers arrived. The sheriff induced the men to return home peacefully. The Wilson Mine yesterday started shipping coal and this aroused the idle union miners.

GARLAND WILL GIVE MILLION TO RADICALS

New York, July 19.—Charles Garland's famous fortune of $1,000,000, which he first rejected and then decided to accept, is now destined to fall in the hands of a group of Greenwich Villa liberal thinkers, whose views of li.', including matrimony, are shared by the young unwilling-to-be millionaire.

The prospective recipients of the money have in- corporated as the "American Fund for Public Service" for the purpose of receiving it.

Charles Garland

Formal announcement of the gift has not been made pending a few finishing touches, but it was learned today that it is imminate a co- pect, and that Garland, who still tills the soil on his remote Cape Cod farm, is thoroughly committed to this plan of divesting himself of his riches.

TO PUSH RADICALISM.

What is to become of the money after it is thus conferred remains a somewhat uncertain matter. According to the incorporators of the fund, they expect to use it in aid of "agencies which are so new or experimental that they do not command general public support."

Garland, who is now twenty-two and separated from his wife and two small children, since his unsuccessful experiments in bringing a "soul mate" into his household a year ago, recently came to New York and agreed to endow the contemplated organization. This came about largely through previous contact with its leading spirits.

NAMES INCORPORATORS.

The incorporators, it was announced today, are Norman M. Thomas and Lewis Gannett of this city, associate editors of the Nation; Professor Robert Morss Lovett of the University of Chicago and Roger N. Baldwin, director of the American Civil Liberties Union.

Directors of the fund are Professor Harry F. Ward of Union Theological Seminary, James Weldon Johnson of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, Rabbi Judah L. Magnes, Scott Nearing of the Rand School, William Z. Foster, secretary of the Trade Union Educational League of Chicago; Miss Mary E. Dewell of the University of Chicago Settlement, and the incorporators.

GARLAND IN BACKGROUND.

The formation of the fund was announced from the office of Walter Nelles, attorney of No. 80 East Eleventh street. Mr. Nelles represents the incorporators, but no mention was made of Garland's connection with it nor would the incorporators discuss that subject.

Their announcement said shuply:

"The establishment of a national fund to promote experimental agencies for public welfare is announced by the incorporators of the American Fund for Public Service, just incorporated in Delaware."

Mr. Baldwin explained that so many legal technicalities were encountered in New York that it was decided to incorporate in Delaware where the laws are less exact.

The new group, the announcement continued, "is analagous to the various 'community trusts' now in successful operation in a number of the larger cities. The governing boards of these and other funds so far established are conservative and disinclined to assist new movements

Beautiful Spring Bursts Into Restaurant

By Associated Press.

New York, July 19.—While scores were eating in a restaurant near Bryant Park a bit of tiling from the floor, with a pop like that of a champagne cork, mounted ceiling ward, pushed by a stream of water that dreiched guests at surrounding tables and flooded the dining room.

When a policeman, attracted by the noise, hurried in, he found everything according to the Volstead act and bedraggled guests staring in amazement at the jet of water that spouted from the floor.

No leaks in the pipes could be located. Engineers said the water came from springs, long pent up, that used to flow through the park nearby, but had been diverted in building construction work. The restaurant management started immediately to cap the spring.

STAR ATHLETE IS NOW ON THE STAGE

Daniel O'Connell, former high school and college athlete, has taken to the stage, and he's doing his stuff at the Boston Theatre this week with Harold Lewis and Bunny White.

During the years 1910 to 1915 O'Connell figured prominently in athletics at Milton High, Dean Academy, Syracuse and Fordham. At Syracuse Daniel twirled for the freshman nine, and followed by taking care of the fullback position on the varsity team for two years. His final year at college he spent at Fordham, where he finished his athletic career.

BUSINESS FIRMS FIGHT EDISON LIGHT RATES

Defying the mailed fist of public-service-corporation control, three aggressive business firms of Boston today attacked the Edison's coal-clause and 10 per cent. charges, which took a toll of millions of dollars from the pockets of the consumers, as exorbitant, unjust and a rank discrimination.

As a penalty for refusing to pay the charges they believe to be unjust, E. T. Slattery Company, Gilchrist & Co. and Martin's Women's Shop have been notified by the Edison that their current will be cut off.

Attorney Arthur M. Beale today declared to the State Department of Public Utilities that Gilchrist & Co. declined to pay those supercharges because they "are false and fraudulent, excessive and unreasonable, they are not charged to all customers alike and they certainly are not charged to the favored customers of the Edison."

BURDEN ON CUSTOMERS.

Attorney George A. Sweetser declared that the Slattery Company refused to pay the Edison "because certain customers of the Edison receive a different rate than the published rate of the Edison and all those customers to whom the excessive charges are not made created a burden upon the remaining customers."

Mr. Beale said that 63,000,000 kilowatt hours are supplied by the Edison to the D and D2 rate customers, but on 40,000,000 kilowatt hours of that current, the rate is not charged to favored customers.

The arguments in favor of their petition to have the State compel the Edison to supply them with power until the justness or injustice of the super-charges is established by the department was left by them to Attorney Grenville S. MacFarland, of the Boston American, who represented the Martin shop.

"The discrimination becomes serious," said Mr. MacFarland, "when it gives to one mercantile establishment a marked handicap over its rival. In one of the cases the discrimination amounts to $24,000 a year.

"A DANGEROUS POWER."

"It is a dangerous power to give a company to turn off the current. It makes the company the master of the situation in any dispute, because rather than have their current shut off the business men would submit to the charges, however unjust they might be."

Mr. MacFarland said the law clearly provides that upon petition of any aggrieved person, the department has ample authority to order the service continued under such terms as the department believes to be reasonable.

Mr. Beale said the Gilchrist Company was willing to pay the disputed charges provided the Edison would agree to refund any amount which the department held that the Edison had unreasonably collected.

Attorney F. Manley Ives of the Edison turned down that offer.

Former Corporation Counsel Arthur D. Hill was ready this afternoon to attack the rates as unjust and indefensible. He appears for the city of Boston.

WAS WAR MEASURE.

The coal clause was put into effect by the Edison ostensibly to cover the increased cost of coal during the war. The 10 per cent. charge was levied to meet additional war costs, the Edison said.

The coal clause charge has been dropped in favor of the A rate customers, who use electricity for lighting, but is still being paid by the B customers who buy current for power uses.

TRY KEENE MAN IN R. I. MINE STOCK DEAL

Providence, July 19.—Police inspectors left here today for Keene, N. H., with extradition papers for Bernard Morgan, president of the Morgan Manufacturing Company at Keene, accused of disposing of thousands of dollars in worthless mining stock here.

Under the name of George A. Steinhart, Morgan, who is a church member at home, a leader in a smart social set, is alleged to have interested many persons in stock in a Montana mine that proved but a hole in the ground. To Frank G. Perry, a Fitchburg, Mass., furniture dealer, Morton is alleged to have sold $15,000 worth of stock in the "mine."

Morgan was arrested a month ago at Keene, when Perry, staging a lone-man hunt, identified him as Steinhart, and swore out a warrant for him. He was arraigned in court, and held in $3,000 bail, agreeing, it is said, to return to Providence for trial. He failed to show up here, however, after a date for trial had been set, so today police inspectors set out to get him.

4-YEAR-OLD GIRL BURNED TO DEATH

Four-year-old Alice Whitcomb was burned to death in her home at No. 23 Heard street, Chelsea, despite the efforts of her mother to save her. Alice was playing with matches. One of them ignited her dress. Her mother heard the screams of the child and smothered the flames with a rug, but the child had been terribly burned.

ELOPING WIFE AND BOARDER CAUGHT

Fall River, July 19.—Following a sensational chase for the last two months between New Rochelle, N. Y., Barrington, R. I., and this city, Guiseppe Di Sabbio, a business man of New Rochelle, located his wife, their five children and a star boarder, Dominick Malmonico, a window washer of New Rochelle. The man and woman were arrested for the Barrington police.

About two months ago the boarder and Mrs. Di Sabbio left New Rochelle, and the husband says that $2,700 went with them.

Betty Alden Adds Boston Sculptress to List of Society Notables

By BETTY ALDEN.

MRS. LARZ ANDERSON.
Mrs. Arthur G. Rotch.
Mrs. Maynard Ladd.

Just three more days—and our list of the "six most noted Boston society women" will be complete. The three matrons named above are each interested in distinctly different pursuits. There's Mrs. Larz Anderson, widely-traveled hostess of rare charm, who devotes so much of her time to her writing; then there's Mrs. Rotch, the new president of the Massachusetts League of Women Voters, who is one of the most untiring workers in the interests of public welfare, while today's "most noted" is Mrs. Maynard Ladd, or rather, Mrs. Anna Coleman Ladd, as she is most commonly known.

A sculptress of wide renown is Mrs. Ladd, wife of Dr. Maynard Ladd of Clarendon street and Beverly Farms. She has exhibited in the largest art galleries of this country and Europe, and examples of her work are to be found on some of the most beautiful estates along the North Shore, as well as in other parts of the country.

ANNA COLEMAN LADD (Anna Watts) was born in Philadelphia, going abroad at an early age to take up her lifework. Though she spent some time in Paris, her important studies were taken in Rome, where she worked in the studios of Ferrari and Gallori. Her marriage to the well-known Boston medical man took place in 1905, but even this did not prevent her devotion to the work of moulding statues which seemed almost to breathe in their lifelikeness.

But it was when the World War left in its wake a trail of shattered, horribly mutilated men, their faces made repulsive with disfiguration, that Mrs. Ladd was given an opportunity to show her marvelous ability. Into her hands was put the terrible task of making a mask for these unfortunate soldiers which would enable them to walk about on the streets without having passersby shudder at them.

And she did.

When she returned from France, back in 1919, she told how she first obtained a photograph of the disfigured soldier as he looked before the war to guide her in building a form of the new face, which was to be as closely as possible a reproduction of the old one. This plaster cast was then put into a solution of copperas, through which an electric current was sent, depositing a film of pure copper. This was the new mask, which Mrs. Ladd made life-like and natural with paint and brush and the skillful use of a real mustache, goatee or full beard, as the case required.

In this way the plucky and enterprising Boston woman restored to about one hundred American and French soldiers their features and happiness. A task which meant endless hours of painstaking work.

Mrs. Ladd, who has two small children, has converted into a most attractive studio one of the barns on their North Shore estate, where she may be seen busily "sculping" many hours in the day. During the Winter time, when the Ladds are at their home on Clarendon street, she uses the upper story of the house for a studio.

OLD KING SOL is raising havoc along the North Shore these days, with the result that all manner of stunning parasols are being carried by members of the feminine contingent Summering there.

Recently Mrs. Valentine Hollingsworth appeared along the beach at Beverly Farms to watch her hubby in swimming. The former Ruby McCormick, sister of Mrs. Marshall Fabyan, was dressed as usual in white, with the addition of a large white silk Japanese parasol.

When it comes to finding novel means of shading himself, the cake must be given to Arthur Little, also of Beverly Farms. For on his way up to the beach for his daily swim, he wears a large white Turkish towel wrapped in Turkish fashion around his head. For slightly more formal occasions he finds his large Panama hat ample protection. Not long ago, by the way, I saw Mr. Little accompanied by his step-daughter, Mrs. Valentine Worthington (Nan Means), and the latter's three little children. Mrs. Worthington and her youngsters have come over from England to spend the Summer with Mr. and Mrs. Little at their villa known as "Spartivento."

FOURTEEN HURT IN BUS MISHAP

Niagara Falls, N. Y., July 19.—Fourteen were injured, four seriously, just before noon today on the Queenston Hill, a short distance from the Canadian Steamship Company's wharf, when a motor bus stalled and plunged back into the ditch, overturning.

All the injured are Toronto people with the exception of the driver, Eddy Wherry of St. Catherines. The passengers, twenty-four in all, had just been transferred from the Toronto steamer to the bus.

Godfrey Parchment, five years old, badly injured internally, is in critical condition and believed dying. His four cousins, the Misses Mary, Margaret, Viola and Catherine Ringroad, were badly cut and bruised about the heads and bodies. Others injured are Mr. and Mrs. H. Brick, Mrs. W. Carnett and Mrs. Smith and mother.

ASKS MORE FUNDS FOR SOLDIERS

Mayor Curley will appear before the City Council Monday to ask for $50,000 additional for the Soldiers' Relief Fund. The cit yhas already expended $1,150,000 for soldiers' relief, $250,000 of which went to the State military fund. Despite the request for an increased appropriation, the Soldiers' Relief Department is steadily cutting down on financial aid to veterans. On March 1 the output was 135,970, on May 1 $120,-964, on June 1 109,000. The saving was mainly accomplished by finding employment for the ex-soldiers. The city expects to save at least $200,-000 during the coming year.

Mayor Curley will also ask for the $50,000 Parkman fund, which is now available. This money will be used to make permanent pavements in the Back Bay Fens, from Westland avenue to Forest Hills.

CITY GETS FIVE MILLIONS BY WHITE WILL

The City of Boston gets over $5,-000,000 in the will of George Robert White, according to an inventory of his estate filed today in the Suffolk Probate Court.

This represents the residue of the $9,183,000 estate, after other bequests are paid.

The city is also beneficiary of a specific bequest of $50,000 which, the will specifies, it is to be used for the creation of a bronze work of art inscribed to the memory of the doner, to be erected in Boston Common.

The $5,000,000 willed to the city is to be used for "works of public utility and buildings."

Of the substance of the estate, according to the inventory, $4,103,-948 is in real estate and $5,023,800 is in personal property. The real estate consists largely of property on Boylston, Tremont, Washington and State streets.

The inventory shows that Mr. White was the owner of the following: Potter Drug and Chemical Corporation, 1,033 shares valued at $1,549,500; First National Bank, 2,000 shares valued at $618,000; Shawmut National Bank, 1,000 shares valued at $240,662; National War Bonds of Great Britain, $250,-886, and Liberty Bonds, $107,301. Pictures, tapestries and art objects in possession of the estate are valued at $97,650.

Here's a $15,000 Job Going A-Begging For Somebody

The Mayor's Commercial and Industrial Bureau is in search for a $15,000 man for a lumber firm that made the request, with the following qualifications necessary in order to get the position:

He must be an engineer familiar with every branch of the lumber industry; must know the best uses for different kinds of timber; know how to handle large crews of men, how to build and operate the roads in the camps, and how to build and operate saw mills and pulp mills. Such a man can get a hearing with the principals by applying to the Commercial and Industrial Bureau at City Hall. The salary is $15,000.

FIVE-CENT FARE HEARING NEXT WEDNESDAY

The first public hearing on the five-cent fare ride and the campaign to unify all the street railway, steamship and railroad lines of Greater Boston will be held next Wednesday morning by the State Department of Public Utilities.

An order directing the department to investigate the entire situation, including the possibility of restoring the five-cent fare on the Elevated, was passed by the last Legislature.

It is under this mandate from the Legislature that the public hearings will be held. The department will make its report to the next legislative session.

Had Your Iron Today?

The Delicious Bread
—of Energy and Iron

SERVE raisin bread twice weekly on your table for three reasons:

1. Flavor; 2. Energy; 3. Iron

You remember how good a generously filled, full-fruited raisin bread can be. Your grocer or baker can supply a loaf like this.

Insist—if he hasn't one he can get it for you.

Full-fruited bread is full of luscious seeded Sun-Maid raisins—rich in energizing nutriment in practically predigested form.

Raisins also furnish fatigue-resisting iron for the blood.

Serve plain raisin bread at dinner or as a tasty fruited breakfast toast with coffee.

Make delicious bread pudding with left-over slices. No need to waste a crumb of raisin bread.

Begin this week the habit of raisin bread twice weekly in your home, for raisin bread is both good and good for you.

GIRL ADDICTS LIKE HASHISH CIGARETTES

In previous instalments "Mildred Morphine," a young, beautiful blonde, who furnished the information through which Dr. Erwin C. Ruth's Federal narcotic agents and District Attorney Thomas C. O'Brien's drug squad were able to make their clean-up of the last few months, told of dope parties in the Back Bay. She continues her story:

"If one could be content with hashish, heroin or cocaine, one never needed to lack a supply of drugs delivered daily at Back Bay apartments. There used to be several pedlars, ostensibly selling smuggled laces, underwear and such things who really dealt chiefly in illicit drugs. It was from them that the girls I knew secured their supplies of 'doped' cigarettes, partially filled with hashish.

"SMART TO SMOKE."

"Although these cigarettes themselves were not strong enough to produce any appreciable effect with a confirmed drug addict, they served to aid in passing away the time between shots of something stronger. And they also served in many cases to introduce young girls to the drug habit.

"Some of the older women used to think it a great joke to pass the hashish cigarettes off on young girls as ordinary smokes. The young girls thought it smart to smoke, of course. Then as the fumes of the hashish began to work, the old timers, on whom they had practically no effect, would have a great laugh.

"As the price of dope became higher some of the girls had a hard time getting money to purchase it. Of course the girls couldn't work, because they couldn't keep off the stuff long enough to hold down a job more than a week at a time. And they found that the dope peddlers soon ceased to give them credit if cash was not forthcoming.

THEN BILLY APPEARED.

"They would pawn or sell their jewelery, and even their clothes to get the stuff, but there was always a point when no means at their command would afford them any more cash.

"Then it was that Billy would come into play.

"Billy, a wealthy young college man of distinguished family, actually paid for most of the drugs used by the coterie I knew, and yet I am sure that he not only never suspected where his money went, but never knew that the girls used dope.

"Billy likes to be a game sport. He liked to be seen in the flash dining places with well dressed, pretty girls. He liked liquor. He liked parties. And when properly liquored up he delighted in buying fur coats. Like many other rich young men, he liked to think himself a sort of year-round Santa Claus for poor girls. All that a good-looking young girl had to do was to shiver with the cold and William would whisk her downtown and provide her with a fur coat.

FUR COAT NO. ONE.

"The first move was, of course, to be unable to go out with Billy, because one was not properly dressed. It was too cold. That would result in Billy purchasing fur coat No. 1.

"The coat was either sold outright or pawned, within a week after Billy had bought it.

"When the money realized from the selling or pawning of this coat had been used up for dope, Billy would get a 'phone call from a distracted young woman who had lost her fur coat. He would hurry over to soothe her and, hardly listening to her well-thought-of lie, delivered with the requisite amount of tears, he would cheer her up by buying another coat.

"The second coat went the way of the first.

ONE GIRL GOT FOUR.

"Most of the girls were conservative. They let Billy off with two coats, but I know of one girl who in three months got four coats, three of them having been 'lost' or 'stolen.'

"And to make the joke complete, I was known Billy to pay for advertising as lost a fur coat which had been pawned for $25, the money being used for a hop party, to which, of course, the tangle William was not invited.

"Working William was not the only means taken by the desperate to get money for drugs, however. When properly doped up any of the girls would take a chance at lifting something from a store, 'boosting' as they called it. Through their underworld connections they had no difficulty in disposing of stolen goods, especially women's apparel.

"It was strange to see what desperate chances a girl would take when filled with morphine or cocaine. Some of the girls, when normal, were horrified at the mere idea of theft. But when doped up there was no chance too desperate for them to take and nothing too mean for them to steal."

(In her next instalment "Miss Morphine will tell how several young women told her they had begun the use of drugs.)

INDIANA MAN TO AID SECRETARY OF LABOR

Washington, July 19.—Carl Robe White of Muncie, Indiana, has been named by President Harding as assistant secretary of labor.

Carl Robe White

Mr. White will be placed in charge of all matters pertaining to immigration. Heretofore this work has fallen on the shoulders of the secretary of labor. The task of adequately handling immigration questions, during the past few years, has grown so heavy that it was found necessary to have one man to give this work his sole attention.

Mr. White is a business man.

13 FREIGHT CARS ARE WRECKED

West Scarboro, Me., July 19.—Thirteen loaded freight cars of a train bound to Portland from Boston were piled up on the marshes, one mile east of here, today, on the Eastern division of the Boston & Maine Railroad. No one was hurt.

Traffic at that point was blocked, trains all being sent over the Western division at "McIntire's Cut." The dropping of a brake-beam was said to have been responsible for the wreck.

DUCHESS INVOLVES PORTUGAL LEADERS

A legal battle that involves many of the leading men of Portugal is being waged by the Duchess of Oporto, formerly Mrs. Philip Van Valkenburg of New York, for possession of her late husband's property.

BEGIN PROBE OF CHICOPEE FLOOD

Chicopee, July 19.—Chief Engineer Frank W. Hodgdon of the State Department of Public Works, assigned by Governor Cox to investigate the cause of the giving way of the dam at Langwald's Pond in Williamsett, the inundation of part of the village, and heavy property damage, began his task today with an inspection of the scene of the disaster and a conference with city officials.

At the same time a relief committee, appointed late yesterday by Mayor J. M. Grise, undertook a survey for the purpose of ascertaining the best methods of ministering to the flood sufferers.

STRIKER FINED $1 IN PICKETING CASE

Frank Davis, one of the striking shopmen on Boston railroads, was fined $1 in Municipal Court today on a charge of sauntering and loitering. He was one of a number of strikers picketing the National Labor Agency at No. 104 Friend street. He was arrested ten days ago. Lawyers appearing for Davis and his union appealed, and will take the case to higher courts. Warning was given that they would continue to picket the agency, engaged in hiring strike breakers for the railroads, but would use banners instead of conversation to persuade men not to accept strike-breaking employment.

LIGHTNING EXPLODES GASOLINE; MAN KILLED

Babylon, N. Y., July 19 (International News Service). — One man is dead, another dying and six others injured as the result of an explosion of a barrel of gasoline, when lightning struck a barn on the estate of William H. Herschfield. The dead man, Nelson Peck, was watching firemen fight the flames in the burning barn when the gasoline exploded.

Question Box for Radio Fans

G. H., North Adams—Experiments to date have not brought any success with the combination of an outdoor aerial and the Armstrong super-regenerative set. In fact Armstrong himself does not recommend it. Remember that there are limits to what the best receiving set in the world can do, since the further off the stations and the less powerful they are, the more will static interfere. If you construct the "soup" set properly, you will have no difficulty in hearing WGY, WJZ, KDKA, and others with a loop. The less powerful stations like WAAJ may, or may not, come in.

H. F. S., Newburyport—All the vacuum tubes used in the Armstrong super-regenerative sets are UV201 (amplifier tubes.) The detector or UV200 are not used at all. The number of plates of a variable condenser is no sign of its capacity. The ordinary 43-plate condensers are suitable for the "soup" hook-up. The station at Annapolis, D. C. (NOF and not NOM) broadcasts at 880 meters.

H. Morris, Salem—You should be able to hear the broadcasts on the loose coupler you describe. You should also be able to tune down to 200 meters. A 23-plate variable condenser shunted across the secondary will help you get closer tuning.

A. V. M., Boston—No. 28 wire is suitable for winding the secondary of a loose coupler. The number of taps you take off is a matter of personal opinion regulated by the size of the variable condenser. With a 23-plate variable condenser taps at every fifteen turns would be sufficient. The hook-up you enclose is correct. You do not need a variable condenser for the grid condenser, although of course a variable condenser having a minimum capacity

7 HURT WHEN MILL HANDS' AUTO UPSETS

Pawtucket, R. I., July 19.—Seven persons were injured, one probably fatally, when a motor truck bringing strike-breakers back from their work at the Jenckes Spinning Company plant overturned in Martinville. The accident came when the driver attempted to swerve his course to avoid a street car.

Antonio Dominico, one of the occupants of the truck, is dying at the Rhode Island Hospital with internal injuries. The others who were injured, who are expected to recover, are: Nicondero Terzeonni, Elizabeth Zarrillo, Madeline Romano, Jennie and Mary Savallo, and Mrs. Jane Otondro.

The injured were treated at the office of Dr. F. U. Luonto, on Charles street, and all except Dominico were sent to their homes.

MIXUP IN ORDERS CAUSES WRECK

Muskogee, Okla., July 19.—Two men were killed and more than a half dozen persons were injured in a head-on collision between a passenger train and an extra freight train on the Missouri, Kansas & Texas Railway four miles east of Tulsa, early today. The dead: Edward Morris, Muskogee, engineer on the passenger train; S. J. Richardson, Tulsa, brakeman on the freight train. The injured are passengers. According to a report received at railway headquarters here, the crew of the freight train misread their orders.

FINANCE —AND— BUSINESS

By Monroe Roberts

(Copyright, 1922, by Cosmopolitan News Service.)

(Writer of column, B. C. Forbes, returns Thursday from vacation.)

A good many investors have been attracted to the regular offerings of the treasury certificates of indebtedness, both because of the excellent yield on these securities and because of their liquid character.

Banking houses and fiduciary institutions are also active in the field for these issues and it is not always possible to secure them when they are wanted.

The Treasury is the gainer by these operations and is thus enabled to gradually reduce the interest rate on new issues.

On August 1 the government will redeem outstanding certificates in the amount of $289,471,500. These certificates are 5½'s and have been running for one year.

Two other issues aggregating $850,000,000 mature on September 14 and will probably be refunded by the issuance of new certificates or by part of the proceeds of a long-term government bond issue, which it is understood is being seriously considered by the Treasury officials.

Treasury Department announces that the negotiations for the refunding of the British war debt of approximately $4,000,000,000 will begin in September, the British representatives having already been selected and commissioned for their task. American investors are particularly interested in this important transaction, because of the fact that it may bring to them an opportunity for investment of a new variety of foreign government bonds on a very attractive basis.

Even though the British government should not offer the war debt refunding bonds directly in this market, they can easily be secured through the investing houses with London connections.

The statement of the head of the house of Dillon, Read & Co. suggesting that the time is not far distant when American investors will subscribe directly for foreign industrial bonds is extremely interesting.

A start has been made in this direction, but only through the direct sponsorship of a number of high-grade American investment concerns.

It is hardly possible to expect these distributors to participate in every issue which they introduce to our markets and therefore it is imperative that our investors become intelligently posted on foreign industrial and commercial bonds, particularly as related to the securities which are seeking their funds through investment channels.

Very little can be done at the present time but preparations for future operations should be made without delay.

NASH MOTORS GOES UP 100 IN 4 DAYS

Nash Motors, recommended by State street financial houses before listing, has to date in four trading days enjoyed an advance of $165 a share. Motors, Steels and Equipments Lead in Market Setback; Call Money at 4%

PIERCE-ARROW TAKES QUICK DOWNTURN

Motors, steels and equipments led in activity during a late hour setback in the New York market, after a day of strength. Profit taking caused most of the recessions, but Pierce-Arrow developed sudden weakness and took a sharp downturn.

Pierce-Arrow at 15¾ was off 3¼ and the preferred at 32 was off 3.

National Lead made another recession of that time, up ¾ at 103¼.

HIGHS FOR YEAR.

Highs for the year included American Car & Foundry, up ⅞ at 169¾; Baltimore & Ohio, 1¼ at 54¾; Chesapeake & Ohio, ¾ at 70.

Crucible, 3¼ at 86¾; Sears-Roebuck, 1¾ at 81; Columbia Gas, ⅝ at 54½; and General Asphalt, 2⅛ at 73¼.

Besides these, Western Union set a record since 1910, up ⅞ at 103¾.

U. S. Steel advanced ⅝ to 102¾, then receded to 101¾. Mexican Pete, after soaring 8 to 169, lost part of its gain.

LATE RECESSIONS.

Late recessions included Studebaker 2¾, Pullman 1¾, Lima Locomotive 2½, American Ice 1¼, Chandler 1 and Rubber 1.

Woolworth was up 2⅝ to 166 and Kresge 5¼ at 142¼. Sugars advanced. Those up a point or more were Punta Alegre and Cuba Cane preferred. Others gained fractions.

Strength in sugar group was based on constant betterment in the technical position of the whole industry. Rise in raw sugar to 3 9-16 was particularly favorable to Cuban American Sugar, which has some 600,000 or 700,000 bags of this crop unsold. The management displayed great faith in holding for higher prices this amount of sugar, which totals some 30 per cent, to 35 per cent. of this season's production.

Money renewed at 4 per cent. and ruled at that figure.

Boston Notes

HORNBLOWER & WEEKS—"Not a sign of weakness anywhere and we expect a very strong market today. After that we may get the usual weekly reaction."

SMALLER OUTPUT of Mexican oil is bound to have a stimulating effect on American oils, whatever the price changes in market may be.

EQUIPMENT rather than the strike is what is hampering railroads today, and that is a basic argument for the equipment issues.

INTERNATIONAL PAPER is still reflecting record consumption and higher trade conditions.

AMERICAN TELEPHONES current high is the result of insistent investment demand. Year's high is 124¾.

DIGELOW-HARTFORD CARPET CO., world's largest manufacturer in this line, is running at capacity, booked for months ahead.

COPPER PRODUCTION continues well below normal in many districts with growing demand pushing up prices.

"WHEN WILL market upswing be resumed?" is question asked on every side; and the answer when most people aren't expecting it.

TONOPAH BELMONT recent shipments have been at rate of more than 20,000 a year; lost year's production was $1,500,000.

EUREKA-CROESUS should enjoy an old-time boom, if there is truth in story of Edsel Ford's interest—it might make a sort of substitute for Muscle Shoals.

LIBERTYS continue to make new peaks with the advent of lower money.

BOSTON ELEVATED for the first time in 11½ years owes nothing to banks. Combine is selling out of line with market, as it yields 8 per cent. at 83.

COPPERMINES sells up and down, but mostly down, on account of drastic reorganization plans. Assessments of hundreds of cents a share market value was had enough without cutting holdings in two.

LIBERTYS EASE WITH SELLING PRESSURE

New York, July 19.—Bond dealings lacked breadth and strength in Tuesday's operations, most domestic and foreign issues showing an irregular tone. Liberty 3½s gave way moderately under selling pressure and most of the 4¼s per cents. cancelled part of yesterday's gains.

CONCORD TAX RATE IS REDUCED $1.50

Concord will have a tax rate of $32.50 this year, the Board of Assessors announce. This is $1.50 less than last year's rate, due, the assessors declare, to a slight increase in valuation, and a decrease in the various taxes. The total valuation is placed at $7,581,766, as compared with $7,402,439 a year ago. Of this amount $6,176,850 is in real estate and $1,356,441 in personal property.

MACK TRUCKS WILL SHOW BIG EARNINGS

New York, July 19.—Mack Trucks, Inc., report for the three months ended June 30 will be published in about a week. It will make a good showing. Earnings in the second quarter were well in excess of the $256,197 net profits in the first quarter and June was the best of the three months is the company's history. Operations were at capacity.

Dividend Declaration

Louisiana & Northwest Railroad Company declared initial dividend of $1.50 a share for the quarter ending Sept. 30, 1922. Stock distributement will be Oct. 1.

Imperial Tobacco Co. of Great Britain & Ireland declared interim dividend of 5 per cent. on ordinary shares, free of British income tax.

GENERAL GAINS ARE SHOWN IN BOSTON

General gains were shown in Boston trading. Edison, up a point at 181, again made a new 1922 high. Eastern Manufacturing, off a point at 8, declined to its lowest for the year.

Some of the advances were: Massachusetts Gas, 1 at 73½ and preferred 1 at 68; New Haven, 1⅜ at 31½; Hood Rubber, 1 at 49; Quincy, 1½ at 45; United Fruit, 1½ at 146⅜; United Drug, 5 at 104½; Boston & Albany, 2 at 147; New England Telephone, 1 at 117; Orpheum, 1½ at 19; Morgenthaler, 1 at 147; and New England Oil, 1¼ at 3.

TEXTILE MEN REFUSE TO ARBITRATE

Concord, N. H., July 19.—Labor Commissioner John S. B. Davie said today that New Hampshire textile manufacturers had refused to submit the issues in the present textile strike to the State Board of Conciliation and Arbitration, insisting that the 10 per cent. wage cut and increase in working hours from forty-eight to fifty-four were necessary for the successful operation of their plants.

Leaders of the striking operatives have refused to submit to arbitration the question of hours. Commissioner Davie recommended that the strike be declared off, that employes be reinstated without prejudice and that local boards of arbitration be named, whose decision shall be accepted. The strike, the commissioner said, had cost manufacturers, workers and the communities involved, many millions of dollars.

Fewer Looms in Amoskeag Running

By CHARLES O. POWER.

Manchester, N. H., July 19.—There are not as many looms running in the Amoskeag Mills this week as last. The strike leaders are confident of that.

When reports to this effect came to James Starr, vice-president of the United Textile Workers of America, who is directing the strike here, he asked that they be verified. A careful checking up furnished him with ample verification of the soundness of the reports.

This falling off is all the more encouraging to him in view of the fact that there has been no let-up in the proselyting efforts of special Amoskeag missionaries among the strikers in their homes and also because the falling off has taken place in the face of a new campaign of inside propaganda.

While the people of Manchester have a real appreciation of the work of Mr. Starr for law and order they do not know the half of what he has had to contend with. Of course, he disapproves thoroughly the order of the Park Commissioners, issued at the request of Chief of Police Healy, that none but Manchester residents may speak at the outdoor rallies of the strikers. He thinks it is unfair and unjust; that it was inspired and is enforced for no other purpose than to hamper the cause of the strikers.

But, so strong is his faith that the fight will be won by the force of public opinion and so resolute is his determination that nothing shall be done that might be twisted into an excuse for action by the police; so much opposed is he to anything that smacks in the slightest degree of a hint to violence, that he puts his foot down hard every time excited individuals propose that the edict of the Park Commissioners be defied.

Not only that, but he is kept busy warding off organizations engaged in the business of making martyrs to order for publicity purposes only.

FIGURES IN MYSTERY BURIAL AT WOBURN

Mrs. Sarah Yoffe, left daughter of the aged caretaker of the cemetery, who kept his records, can find no trace of the strange burial. Below, Max Kreitzer is pointing to the grave in which the mystery body lies. The body is to be exhumed by police authorities.

WILL EXHUME MYSTERY BODY

the funeral procession, passed by, visible through the window. In a choking voice the old man cried:

"There's the man!"

As Attorney Samuel Miller and Agent Edward F. Gorman of the Woburn Board of Health, who had been questioning Kreitzer, turned, the caretaker tottered and fell.

He never recovered consciousness. He died within half an hour.

Whatever else he may have known about the mystery of "Grave 2, Left," was buried with him today when his body was interred.

By a peculiar coincidence it was Max Kreitzer, the twenty-three-year-old son of the caretaker, who discovered the coffin in "Grave 2, Left," which spot, by the way, is in "member's row" of the Anshei Lebowitz plot, and is recorded in the cemetery records as a choice plot.

FINDS MYSTERY COFFIN.

Max wielded the pick a few weeks ago when the mystery coffin was found. He was digging a grave for another casket when his pick struck the coffin. Max reported the matter to those in charge of the funeral. An investigation was begun. There was nothing in the records of the congregation or the cemetery to explain the coffin that was already in the plot.

The congregation, a Boston burial society of Jews, brought their attorney, Mr. Miller, into a conference. His first step was to interview Mr. Gorman. Together they went to the home of Kreitzer at Washington street in East Woburn.

Before he died Kreitzer had told the following story:

"Morris Goldhagen brought the coffin to the cemetery last February. It was snowing terribly. He told me he would give me the burial certificate the next day. If there's anything unlawful about the burial, Goldhagen is the man you want to question."

GOLDHAGEN'S VERSION.

Goldhagen was interviewed by a reporter of the American. He said:

"I never took a body there without a permit. The first time I heard of this case was about the end of May or the first of June, when I brought a body there. I saw this grave, and it looked smooth. The whole thing looks queer to me. I think the person in that grave was buried a year ago. There was no sign that the turf had been disturbed last Summer.

"It's very strange. Kreitzer must have been uneasy about it. Two or three weeks ago Kreitzer started to say something to me about my telling him to have that grave dug. I thought he was kidding me. I didn't take him seriously."

ACCUSES GOLDHAGEN.

Jacob Stanotsky, Goldhagen's employer, was equally positive that his assistant had nothing to do with it.

But a direct accusation against Goldhagen was made by Minetta Kreitzer, daughter of the dead caretaker. She said:

"Goldhagen told father he would bring the burial permit later. It was a regular thing with Morris. He brings bodies here for burial and then tells us he will bring the permits later. Lots of times I know that he has left the permit with a stonecutter down the street, just so the stonecutter should know where to look for business."

The grave has been under the constant vigil of a police officer since Monday. It was thought likely that the person or persons responsible for the interment would make an effort to dig up the grave and spirit the body away so as to cover up traces of the illegal burial.

District Attorney Endicott P. Saltonstall, upon hearing of the case, advised Attorney Miller to get a complaint against those suspected of burying the body without a permit.

When the case was first brought to light, it seemed to be taken for granted that the body in the coffin was that of a girl. The size of the pine box, however, indicates that it might be the body of a man.

At any rate, the authorities are convinced that there is sufficient mystery in the case to warrant an exhumation of the body and, if possible, an autopsy to determine the cause of death.

FOUR ARRESTS IN MINE WAR MURDER

Wellsburg, W. Va., July 19.—Four well-known farmers of Brooke County were lodged in the county jail here today by Captain W. W. White of the State police. The four men are charged with murder. The finding of empty ammunition boxes on their farms is said to have led to their arrest.

The prisoners are Martine Cline, 48, and his son, Shirley Cline, 19; Riley Stout, 40, and his son, Graham Stout, 19, who occupy farms close to Cliftonville, where on Monday, during a pitched battle, Sheriff H. M. Duvall and three other men were killed.

Mountain extradition, giving a man a quick shove over the State line, continues operating efficiently at the West Virginia-Pennsylvania border. Five more suspects have been pushed over the Pennsylvania line and were promptly grabbed by waiting troops on this side. They are lodged in the Brooke County jail.

GIRLS RESCUED FROM TRAIN'S PATH

Howard Chapman, waving a handkerchief in the path of a Boston & Maine train, attracted the engineer's attention in time to prevent the locomotive from crashing into an automobile containing Miss Belle M. Hallaway of Lynn, which had stalled on a crossing in Saugus.

Miss Hallaway, who was driving the machine, became confused when, emerging from behind a truck as she drove on to the crossing, she saw the approaching train. Miss P. E. Hodgkins of Lewiston, Me., who was with her, jumped from her seat.

Chapman, seeing the predicament of the women, sprinted down the track and was able to stop the train.

PRESIDENT HARDING PLANS MAINE VISIT

Portland, Me., July 18.—President Harding is expected to visit Portland and Poland Springs, according to information received from Washington. He will be the guest of Senator Hale and is expected to tour the Maine coast in the Mayflower. The President has indicated that he will accept the invitation of Secretary of War Weeks to stop at Mount Prospect, N. H.

NEWTON EDITOR OPENS NEWSPAPER MEETINGS

Missoula, Mont., July 19 (By the Associated Press).—Plea that editors uphold the slogan, "Law and Order," in their various communities was made before the opening session of the National Editorial Association's annual convention here today by J. C. Brimblecomb of Newton, Mass., president of the association.

Mr. Brimblecomb placed emphasis on enforcement of the prohibition laws. "The newspapers of this country have a great opportunity to give substantial aid to the cause of law and order by refusing to publish any of the so-called jokes and sneers on the 18th amendment to the constitution of the United States," he said.

SAILOR WOULD MARRY LEAH SILVER

Philadelphia, July 19.—Raymond L. Cullen, a young sailor on the U. S. Destroyer Lampson, says he wants to marry Leah Silver, mother of the sixteen-months-old "swamp baby," Ruth, before she is brought to trial for deserting the child.

"I want to do what's right," he said at the Philadelphia Navy Yard. "I wanted to marry Leah when this all happened, but we quarreled. If she is willing I want to marry her now before her trial, if possible, if that will help her."

When told of Cullen's offer, the girl, now in a Brooklyn sanitarium, is said to have remarked:

"He needn't trouble himself. I wouldn't marry him now."

But it is the belief of Chaplain Duff of the navy, who is interested in young Cullen, that she may be induced to change her mind.

"I met Leah first in Boston," said Cullen. "She was hugging her aunt in a restaurant. I had just returned from France, where I served in the 26th Division.

"She was a nice girl and I loved her. We quarreled over my enlistment in the navy. She said I enlisted she was through with me, but I did, for two years. These two years are almost up now and if I marry her I will get out.

"I went to Boston last year and tried to see her, but failed. I received a letter from her about a year ago. That was the last I heard from her until I read of her trouble. I want to care for her and the baby."

Nervous Stomach Causes Gas

Baalmann's Gas Tablets will relieve the distress caused by gas.

Gas in the stomach and bowels doesn't always result from dyspepsia. Improper diet or fermentation of food. In most cases it is due to a slight sluggish condition of the stomach. To get rid of the trouble you must build up and strengthen those weak, irritated nerves of the stomach. Taking artificial digesters, such as pepsin or bismuth, only makes the stomach weaker than ever. It is like using dope to deaden pain—the relief given is deceptive and harmful.

Baalmann's Gas Tablets act directly upon the affected nerves and gradually assist in restoring them to their natural, healthy state. Gas and bloating will quickly disappear, and you will no longer be bothered with pain around your heart, palpitation, shortness of breath, gurgling at the pit of the stomach or dizziness after eating. Go to any live druggist and get Gas Tablets in the 50-cent yellow package. Sold by all leading druggists, price $1. J. Baalmann, Chemist, San Francisco.

SMOOT ADMITS LIPPITT PROPOSED JUMP IN COTTON TARIFF

PUBLIC ANGERED BY DISCLOSURE THAT ADDITIONAL TARIFF JUMP ON fancy cotton cloths, as proposed in new Republican tariff bill, was suggested by former Senator Lippitt, millionaire Rhode Island maker of textiles. Senator Smoot of Utah, ranking Republican on the finance committee, admits that the additional 12 per cent. tariff boost on cotton goods was "word for word" as suggested by the ex-Senator from Rhode Island, whose mills dot the neighboring State. The Arkwright Mills of Fall River, shown above, is said to be one of the mills in which Mr. Lippitt has an interest. The latter is shown in circle.

GET BIG CACHE OF ARMS IN GERMANY

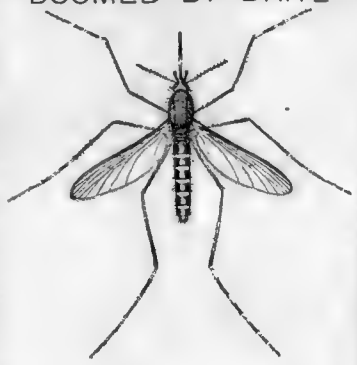
By International News Service.

Berlin, July 19.—Large stores of arms and ammunition which had been stored in various parts of Germany are being unearthed, it was revealed today. A cache of arms, including dum dum bullets, has just been located at Potsdam. It was reported from Stuttgart that the inter-allied military control commission has found 800 machine guns which had been hidden.

It is reported that some of the arms and munitions had been collected for revolutionary purposes. President Richter of the Berlin police department said that he believed a number of arrests will be made within the next few days in connection with the assassination of Dr. Walter Rathenau late Foreign Secretary. Interest in the murder of the former Foreign Secretary has been revived by the suicide of the two actual assassins, Herman Fischer and Ehwn kern at Castle Saalack in Middle Germany.

The Socialists are trying to make unprecedented political capital of the killing of Rathenau. They are continually reiterating the allegation that the Nationalists, Monarchists and Militarists have laid nation wide plans for revolution. The names of Ludendorff, Von Tirpitz and others are being mentioned in connection with the alleged revolutionary conspiracy.

HUB'S BITING PEST DOOMED BY DRIVE



WHITE MARKED SALT MARSH MOSQUITO

Breeding along the coast, this insect commonly known as "The Jersey," is one of the most active pest of this character. It has been known to fly forty miles and its bite is severe.

Drops Dead on Lawn

Worcester, July 19.—While walking on the lawn in front of his home, Joseph M. Davis, sixty-five years old, of No. 806 Grove street, dropped dead.

PLAN TO FIGHT 4 BREEDS OF MOSQUITOES

The war against mosquitoes, about to be inaugurated by the recently organized Anti-Mosquito Association of Massachusetts, is to be directed against four varieties of this pest, according to J. Albert Ryan, director of fly and mosquito suppression of the Brookline Board of Health. Mr. Ryan is secretary of the State organization and is an expert on the subject of suppression of mosquitoes.

The mosquitoes against which the fight is to be directed are: White-marked salt marsh mosquitoes, brown salt marsh mosquitoes, both of which are found in Boston and vicinity, and the pitcherplant and Culex pipiens, which are found farther inland. The first two mentioned varieties breed chiefly in salt marshes where the water is brackish, while the last two named varieties breed in fresh water, inland swamps, rain barrels, etc.

FLIES FORTY MILES.

The white-marked salt marsh mosquito, which breeds in Boston and along the coast is one of the most active of all pests of this character. He has been known to fly 40 miles, and his bite is far from pleasant. The beak and feet of this variety are dark, white-banded. It has a yellowish white stripe lengthwise on the upper surface of the abdomen.

This variety is most numerous in Boston and vicinity and is usually referred to as the Jersey mosquito, because of its abundance along the New Jersey coast south of Hackensack. It is sometimes called the "convict" because of the fact that its body is marked by black and white stripes.

It is not difficult to identify this variety as the markings are pronounced. Large broods of this type have been known to fly inland 20 to 30 miles. Occasionally they are found farther inland after being carried by automobiles.

EGG LAID IN MARSH.

The egg of this kind is deposited in soft salt marsh, where it is floated out by high tides or rain. The larvae come from the egg a few hours later and wriggles about in the pool. Under normal conditions the wrigglers develop into full-fledged mosquitoes in from 10 to 12 days. The length of time necessary for breeding depends upon rainfall and temperature.

Having strong wings this mosquito makes long flights. It begins migration in search of food and shelter a day or two after emerging from the water. According to experts this variety does not usually enter houses, but confines its nuisance by flights to gardens and porches. It becomes very active about dusk.

The technical name of the white marked mosquito is Culex sollicitans, and is a more serious pest than the brown variety. It breeds within from 100 to 250 feet of the shore and develops in places reached by the higher tides.

To wipe out this variety, it is necessary to ditch or drain in such manner that no pools will remain after retreat of tides, or by a series of dikes which will prevent water from reaching the places where the mosquitoes previously bred.

RESCUES BABY FROM HARBOR AFTER FALL

An eleven-months-old baby was saved from drowning in the harbor off North End Park pier, when a life guard leaped into the water and brought it ashore after it had fallen from its mother's arms.

The child, Camela Pansiave, had been carried to the end of the pier by its mother, Mrs. Camela Pansiave of No. 12 Thacher street, North End. While the mother stood enjoying the breeze, the infant fell from her grasp.

Mrs. Pansiave's screams attracted Benjamin Sawaline, a life guard, who dived into the water and brought the baby to safety.

Mosquito Bites Autoist, Dumping Car Over Bank

New York, July 19.—A large Jersey mosquito landed on the face of Louis Leontt while he was driving his automobile at Dead Man's curve in Kearny. The bite caused Leontt to lose control of the steering wheel and the automobile went over a five-foot embankment and overturned. Neither Leontt nor his wife nor any of their three children, who were riding in the car, were injured.

FULTON TO GET WILLS BOUT IF HE WINS FROM TRACEY

PLASTERER TO BATTLE AT REVERE SHOW

By JACK CONWAY

Fred Fulton will receive a bout with Harry Wills if he manages to punch out a victory when he battles Jim Tracey of Australia in a ten round bout at the Unity Club's open-air show at its Revere Cycle Track Friday night. Wills has already signed to meet Jack Jackson at Ebbets Field, Brooklyn on August 5 and would not have any objections to taking a whirl at Fulton.

Wills, a keen student of the ring game figures he requires several tens before his match with Dempsey. He realizes it must be in the best condition of his career to stand a chance of victory in his tussle with "Tiger Jack."

Fulton has an idea he will be able to knock Wills out of the Dempsey mold. The lanky plasterer has the natural qualifications for a fighting man. He's tall, rangy, a good mover and packs a heavy punch in his right. If he can dope out a defense which would protect his jaw from his opponent's right hand thrusts, he would be a mighty difficult man to beat.

Perfect Blocking Needed for Success in Ring

The men who reach the heights of boxing success are invariably able to block an opponent's punch.

Did you notice how Eddie Shevlin picked off Jack Perry's right hand smashes at the Arena the other night?

Perry let loose enough right handers to knock out a regiment of fighters. Shevlin either ducked out of the way of the blows or picked them off in mid air.

A fancy fellow like Fulton should be able to build up a defence for a right hand punch. Fred has an almost perfect left hand. His effectiveness with this hand was what enabled him to stop Sam Langford, John Lester Johnson and Bartley McGrath in bouts in this city.

Fulton Eager to Win Over Tracey Friday

Fulton is set upon putting the skids under Tracey at Revere, Friday night. As he's never been beaten in a Massachusetts ring, the big plasterer is very confident he'll dispose of the Australian.

"It will be Tracey's second American start. Before being acclimated, he foolishly took on Bill Brennan in New York. Brennan won, but Tracey says it would be a different story if the two men were to clash again.

Joe Woodman and George Lawrence are managing Tracey.

Jack Dempsey Signs for Series of Exhibitions

Jack Dempsey intends to keep busy giving exhibitions with sparring partners Johny McGann of the Fanseuil Club has booked the champion at several New England spots.

Dempsey, of course, would much rather engage in regular battles. The various boxing commissions, however, seem to think that about every boxer in the world with the exception of Harry Wills would be a set-up for the title holder.

As champions go nowadays, Dempsey has not been a big money maker as a result of boxing commissions refusing to permit him to show in regular quarrels. In the days before boxing commissions Dempsey would have been able to have accumulated a young fortune by knocking over setups.

Benny Leonard Has Got Big Money

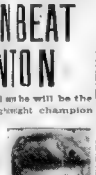
Benny Leonard, lightweight boss, has been the best of the ring money makers. Leonard has boxed frequently and has always been paid top money for his services. At Hoyle's Thirty Acres on July 27 Benny will grab another big bundle when he rolls dice with Lew Tendler. It is expected that this match will draw a $40,000 gate. Leonard must be knocked out or commit a foul to lose his championship as no decisions are permitted in New Jersey.

Will Tendler be able to score with the big slam?

New York says "No!"
Philadelphia answers "Yes."
What do YOU say?

FRUZETTI SURE HE CAN BEAT CLINTON

Jimmy Fruzetti says he will be the New England lightweight champion after his ten-round bout with Johnny Clinton at the Walkover A. C.'s show at Brockton Friday night.



Jimmy Fruzetti.

Fruzetti defeated Clinton just prior to the time the latter won the championship. And now Brockton Jimmy is out to do a little title grabbing of his own.

Meanwhile Clinton is training carefully under the direction of Eddie Mack and says he will be all set to bang his way to another victory Friday p. m.

We shall see.

Spencer Fights Moore

New York, July 13 — Willie Spencer is boxing daily with "Pepper" Martin so as to be in the best condition for Roy Moore, whom he will box Friday night at Coney Island in a ten round bout.

MIDDLEWEIGHT 'TITLE' AGAIN VACATED

New York, July 13—Harry Greb is persona non grata in the boxing community as far as the boxing community is concerned. Harry was proclaimed by the solons some time ago as the gentleman worthy to defend the middleweight title which the same solons declared defunct as far as Johnny Wilson was concerned.

Harry accepted the honors gracefully and then retired into solemn silence. Dave Rosenberg in the meanwhile, stepped up and posted an honest-to-goodness check for $2,500 to fight for the vacant throne.

This was greeted with loud hurrahs from the populace, which expected to see Greb and Rosenberg start right off and battle for the hidden jewel. The Solomons decreed a certain date on which Greb was to signify his intention of accepting Rosenberg's challenge.

The light heavyweight champion forgot all about it and now must do penance indefinitely for his lapse of memory. He is up at Saranac Lake with a sick wife, and his manager, George Engel, who is an outcast in the same rule, is in Pittsburgh.

There is hardly any doubt that when Engel returns he will be able to clarify the situation. It is hardly possible that Greb will be able to tip the beam at 160 pounds the regulation weight, and do himself justice. Harry isn't growing lighter as minutes roll on.

Rosenberg now occupies the center of the stage for the first blow. He posts $2,500 will be entitled to get Rosenburg for the privilege of being called the middleweight champion of the world, barring all parts except New York State.

DR. NICK WINS NORTHAMPTON 2:11 STAKE

Northampton, July 13. — Three good races are on this afternoon at the Fair Grounds, the 2:18 stake for 2:15 pace and the 3 yearold stake trot. In the latter, Princess Hawah, Harvest Storm and the Heath entered youngster, Ruby Hall will come together.

Yesterday's crowd was rather small for an opening day. Islander scored his fifth straight victory in the 2:14 stake pace and Trumpet defeated an ordinary field of two year olds in the stake trot, his fourth straight win.

Dr. Nick, with Harry Beutel teaming, surprised everybody by tramping over a fast bunch of trotters in the 2:11 stake.

HANK GOWDY GOES HOME FOR REST

Cincinnati, O., July 13.—Hank Gowdy was under the weather when the Braves left here and went to his home at Columbus to rest up during the St. Louis series. He will rejoin them at St. Louis if necessary but it is planned for him to remain at Columbus until the team passes through on their way East.

THREE BIG MATCHES IN SINGLES IN TENNIS TOURNAMENT

TILDEN SHOWS GREAT FORM AT LONGWOOD

By FRED C. LANE.

Three single matches, all of which should bristle with action, are on the program of the third day's play of the Longwood Cricket Club tennis tournament, now being played at the Chestnut Hill courts. William Tilden of Philadelphia meets Phil Bettens of California; R. Norris Williams of Boston plays Jim Davies of California, and Wallace Johnson of Philadelphia plays Carl Fisher, also of that city.

All three matches will be played on the championship courts, best three out of five sets. The big opportunity is presented Tilden today for it is a chance to eliminate one of the Californians seeking the Longwood cup.

It is the Philadelphian's first attempt to win the title, and playing from his play yesterday, he should have little trouble annexing the prize so dear to tennis players.

Tilden is a rare form and demonstrated in the doubles matches yesterday.

R. Norris Williams of Boston takes on the fastest of the invaders in playing Jim Davies. Davies is a finished tennis player and has a wonderful service.

Wallace Johnson is favored to win over Carl Fisher. Fisher defeated George Wrightman and F. H. Godfrey, both of Boston, but meets his master in Johnson, who is rated in the first ten.

Niles and Rice playing against Larned and Inman in the second round of the Longwood doubles, is the best doubles match of the afternoon. Hot weather will handicap Niles.

Tilden and Williams engaged in a one set exhibition affair previous to their matches and Williams sure did look the part. The Boston star is at the top of his game and judging from the little set-to will make a worthy opponent for the champion should they meet in the final round.

The best match yesterday was between Davies and Henry Guild of Boston. It might be called "the battle of service."

Davies after some placement shots carried off the honors in two sets, 7—5 and 9—7.

Davies had the match all sewed up in the second set with six games to five and the score 40-30 in his favor. The hard driving service of Guild delayed Davis' victory, causing the Pacific Coast flyer to go to the ninth game.

The Tilden-Johnson, Hutter Shaw doubles match could hardly be called an affair so easy did the Philadelphians take the Bostonians into camp. The local team opened up the match and won the first game but that was the limit of their ability as Tilden and Johnson walloped through the next six games and gave their opponents but two points. Tilden time and again drove the ball out of the court with his smashing overarm play. He alone won three love games with his service. Johnson played a fine net game and laid down many pretty shots on the side lines that were without the reach of the Longwood members.

Willow Juniors Play for State Title Saturday

The Willow Juniors of South Boston, who have gone through the season meeting all comers and who have won sixteen straight games from different clubs around Greater Boston, will clash with the Tiger Juniors of Fall River, who have won fifteen out of their eighteen games and claim the championship of Southeastern Massachusetts. They will play at the Fall River public playgrounds Saturday afternoon for the Junior championship of the State. A large delegation will accompany the Willows from South Boston.

STOUGHTON C.A. TO STAGE BIG SPORT DAY

The first venture of the Stoughton Catholic Athletic Association in track athletics will take place on July 29, when a six-mile road race will be run in conjunction with the annual field day.

Although the club has been identified for many years in baseball, football and basket ball, it is only within the past two years that it has fostered track athletics and placed a team out for competition.

Carl Linder.

Among the most prominent men who have been running consistently in the distance events are John F. Hyde, Joseph A. Rideout, Charles Kilna and Dominick DeMatteo.

These young runners are protegees of Frank M. Kanaly of M. I. T., who has been actively identified with coach and physical directors of the clubs for the past three years.

The race on July 29 promises to bring out a large list of entries. Among those already entered are Jimmy Henigan of the Dorchester Club, Carl Linder, H. A. Arsenault, Martin Silver of Joseph Rideout Waltham and Eric Seim of Quincy.

The prizes to be awarded are six silver Derby Re cups and a gold watch for time prize.

Entry blanks may be secured by writing to John A. Kelliher, Stoughton, or by telephoneing Stoughton 93

Salem Invades Concord

Concord Town Farm has had a return game with Salem for tomorrow evening on Concord Centre playground.

1922 BAD YEAR FOR BRITISH ATHLETICS

New York, July 19.—This year will be recorded as one of England's most unsuccessful in the defence of her national sporting trophies open to foreign competition, all except one of the invading groups of athletes having sailed away victors. However, with the international season but half finished, Britishers coming to America may belatfre the score.

In addition to a drop in the sports that are as familiar to other lands as to England, Britain's representatives have been defeated in cricket and golf, two of the native games. There is some balm for them in the successful invasion of a combined Oxford-Cambridge team that early this year defeated by acregate score a group of American universities in the originally Indian game of lacrosse.

England will invade the United States with representatives in polo, golf and swimming. Several of England's best golfers are in the American open which began yesterday at Chicago. Miss Hilda James, star swimmer, will reach here this month, and Miss Edith Leitch, sister of the former champion, will enter the American women's golf championship tournament.

SARAZEN SUBS FOR JOCK HUTCHISON

Philadelphia, July 19.—Gene Sarazen, the new American open golf champion, has been selected to substitute for Jock Hutchison in a special foursome at the Philmont Club Saturday as Hutchison notified the club he would be unable to appear. Sarazen will be paired with Charles Hoffner, Pennsylvania State pro champion, against Walter Hagen, the British open champion, and Joe Kirkwood, champion of Australia.

THIS QUEEN THE "ACE" OF SECOND SACKERS

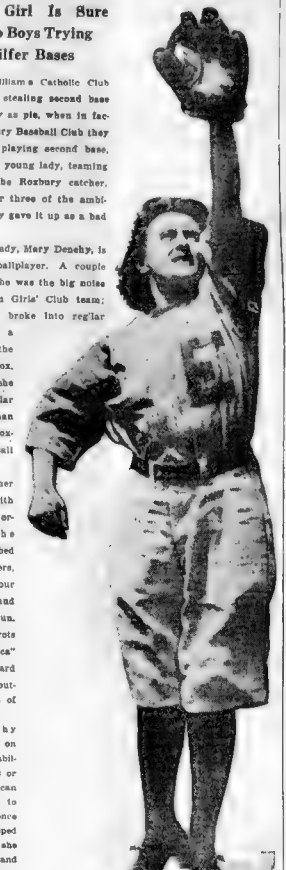
Roxbury Girl Is Sure Death to Boys Trying to Pilfer Bases

The St. Williams Catholic Club nine thought stealing second base would be easy as pie, when in facing the Roxbury Baseball Club they noted a girl playing second base, but after that young lady, teaming nicely with the Roxbury catcher, nabbed two or three of the ambitious ones they gave it up as a bad job.

The young lady, Mary Denehy, is really some ballplayer. A couple of years ago she was the big noise on the Boston Girls' Club team; last year she broke into regular baseball as a member of the Roxbury Red Sox, and this year she signed as regular second baseman with the Roxbury Baseball Club.

Playing her first game with the last-named organization she not only nabbed the base-stealers, but made four dizzy pickups and batted in a run. She and Carrots Dunn, "Mecca" and Gilly Howard were the outstanding stars of the fray.

Misl Denehy prides herself on her fielding ability. No liners or grounders can come too hot to handle, and once the ball is clasped in her glove she knows where and how to throw it. Her quick thinking and accurate pegging had led to a number of double plays in recent games.



Schedule of Twilight Games This Week

TONIGHT

J. J. Connelly Club vs. South Boston All Stars at C. J. Lee Grounds, South Boston.

St. Andrew's A. A. vs. Reading Town Team at Reading.

St. Joseph's Catholic Association vs. Cornet All Stars at Little River Playgrounds, Lynn.

Dorchester Baseball Club vs. Medford City Team at Medford High Grounds.

THURSDAY EVENING

North Cambridge K. of C. vs. Malden K. of C. at Ferryway Green, Malden.

Dorchester Baseball Club vs. J. J. Connelly Club at J. J. Connelly grounds, Roxbury.

FOUR GAMES IN TWILIGHT LEAGUE

The people who trot along with the different clubs in the Greater Boston Twilight League will have to toss coins or some other sort of a thing to get an idea which way to turn, for eight teams will battle for honors tonight in the well-known infant league.

The J. J. Connelly Club of Roxbury will set sail and journey over to the C. J. Lee grounds in South Boston, where they will meet the All-Stars. St. Andrews will push off a little ahead of time and are due to appear at the Reading ball orchard, where they meet Frank Tanner's Reading Town Team.

The Somerville folks will follow the crowd to Lynn, where the St. Joseph's Catholic Association meet up with the strong Cornet All-Stars at the Little River Playgrounds. The fourth battle will be staged between the Dorchester Baseball Club and the Medford City Team at Fulton Street Grounds, Medford.

GLEASON ALL-STARS PLAY AUBURN A. A.

The folks out around the Columbia evening playgrounds will see a good tussle this evening when the Gleason All-Stars entertain the fast Auburn A. A. of Cambridge. The Gleason All-Stars have in Gleason, catcher; Gleason and Robertson, pitchers; Dick Gleason, first use; Franes, second base; Goss, short, and O'Neil, third base. The outfield is Carey, Welchlin and Nick Taylor.

Will am Kinny

The Gleason All Stars have Saturday and Sunday dates open. Communicate with Manager Kilroy, 29 Elmore street, Roxbury, or telephone Rox-4894-W.

Windsor Horsemen Break

Windsor, Ont., July 19.—H. T. Burke and J. S. Ward have severed connections. The Ward Goose horses will be shipped to Saratoga and Burke expressed a desire to remain on the Canadian circuit for the remainder of the season.

TOOLE LEADS FIELD IN SPRINGFIELD GOLF

Springfield, July 19.—Playing close golf, James A. Toole of the Springfield Country Club led in the early returns for the first 18 holes in the annual tourney for the Massachusetts State open championship this morning. Toole turned in a card of 73, going out in 36 and coming home with consistent 37.

Outside of Albert Cuico of Bridgeport he was the only player of the fifty-four who started to break better than 80. Par for the course is 72, and the record is held by Willie Maguire, the Houston, Texas., professional who made the 18 holes several years ago in 68.

The heavy rains of last night made the course heavy and so much casual water lay on the course that the players were permitted to pick up on the third, eighth, tenth, eleventh and seventeenth holes.

Although sixty-eight golfers entered the tourney, withdrawals reduced the list considerably and such men as Gene Sarazen, the new national open champion, and Jesse Guilford, the State open champion, were found among the missing. Likewise Francis Outtmet found he could not break away from his business in Boston. The absence of these three men reduced the field of its expected luminaries not a little.

Toole's card had six 3s, five 4s and the rest 5s. His card follows:

Out..... 4 5 3 5 5 3 5 3 5—36
In..... 5 5 4 5 3 4 4 4 5—37—73

* Amateur.

John Cowan of Oakley bettered par for the Springfield Country Club course by one stroke in winning his first 18 holes in 71. He went out in 35, which is two better than par, and came in in 36, which is one above what the card calls for.

Hard to Guess the Winner Because of Quality of Field

To forecast the winner of this event would be hazardous, as there are so many high-grade players entered, but it is fairly safe to predict that a score of 296 will be good enough for the first $200 prize.

There are places in the money awards for eight players, any amateur figuring in this first select group receiving an award of $15.

Four 74s seem like high-class shooting and particularly so as the deluge yesterday slowed up the fairways somewhat, checking a bit the distance on the long rolls.

Par for Springfield a beautiful layout is 72, the outward half being 35 and the distance 3,340 yards. The inward is the most difficult nine, measuring 3,270 yards, with a par of 37.

There is only one hole measuring over 500 yards, but on two or three holes the brassie for the second shot will be used by most players. There are five par five holes, and five three holes, the rest being fours.

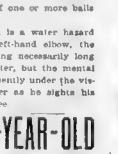
Water Hole Will Spell Trouble for Many

The number four, or first water hazard hole, will spell trouble for many, for although the three looks easy, a water hazard in front of the tee extends to the edge of the green, with woods and traps at the sides and beyond. This hole can be done in five to ten, if one or more balls find the water.

The thirteenth is a water hazard affair with a left-hand elbow, the tee shot not being necessarily long to carry the water, but the mental hazard is prominently under the vision of the player as he sights his line from the tee.

ELEVEN-YEAR-OLD KID SOME DIVER

Neil Carlson, at eleven years of age, is the youngest diving star on the Pacific coast. He is a protege of Clarence Pinkston, world's champion, and has already won title honors in competition.



Young Carlson feels more at home when diving from the thirty-foot springboard than when he is using the ten-foot board.

ANNA MURRAY STARS IN CHARLESTOWN GAME

Miss Anna Murray may not be in the class with George Eisler, but she showed a large crowd last night at Sullivan square playgrounds that she is a pretty nifty guardian of the infield sack. In addition to handling everything perfectly around the first sack, she came through with a neat batting.

Miss Murray's team, Charlestown Athletics, defeated the Linden Base ball Club 4 to 3 in a seven-inning game. It was the first of a series of games, the second will be played tonight at Ferryway Green, Malden.

HERMAN RETIRES FROM THE RING

Pete Herman, former bantamweight champion, has announced his retirement from the ring after being in the fistic game for ten years. Pete first started battling in 1912, and in 1917 won the bantam crown from Kid Williams. In the early part of 1921 he lost the title to Joe Lynch, sailed to England and decisively beat Jimmy Wilde, and returned to meet the leaders in his class. Meeting Lynch in Brooklyn in July, 1921 he regained his crown, only to lose it to Johnny Buff.

Babe Bunts 'Em Now

New York, July 19.—Babe Ruth has abandoned hope of a home-run record this season and is now striving desperately to crowd into the .300 class.

He proved this recently against Shocker. Babe got three hits, but two of them were cunningly placed bunts, which caught the enemy infield flatfooted.

WHITE SOX HERE TO FATTEN UP THEIR BATTING AVERAGES

RED SOX OUT TO STOP GLEASON'S CHAMPS

By NICK FLATLEY.

Another large portion of trouble for the stumbling Red Sox arrived in these parts today, Kid Gleason and his third place Chisox reporting for a four game series at the Fenway. When Wild Bill and his crew were here last a few days collected three games without much difficulty.

Times have changed, though. The boys from the West were in the cellar then, and everybody agreed they belong there. But they have staged one of the greatest revolutions of the year and for the past week or so have been traveling at a faster clip than any other club in the league.

The team isn't a slugging aggregation, like the Tigers, although it has plenty of punch. It's one of those clubs that figure for everything in sight, and a whole lot that's hidden back of the horizon.

Mr. Gleason has been getting fine [illegible]ing from Faber his old reliable Robertson of no-hit fame and several other youngsters. He has four regular batting slow, the quartet being massed in the batting order, starting with Harry Hooper.

Greatest of Right Fielders Shows No Sign of the Years

The greatest of right fielders is like the other sons of his day. He never shows any sign of the years. He's licking the mazuma for as a mark will be next [illegible] when he was in the heyday of his youthful glory.

[illegible] and Sheely have followed Harry's pace and wrecked a whole lot of ball games. There's not a chance that these Chisox will get out ahead of the Yanks or Browns, but the club will fight all the way down the line.

"This club can't die" [illegible] Evers "has the finest spirit I've ever seen. John I [illegible] was with the champions of 1914 and Braves, too. They didn't look the much when I joined them, didn't seem to have the material for a successful season. But it was soon evident that appearances were wrong.

Kids Were Scrapping Like Wildcats Even in Spring

"Even in the spring games against the world champion Giants, before the few players who could be called regulars were in shape, the kids were scrapping like wildcats. As a result they handed the New Yorkers several times, and thereby got the impression, which is always the true one in baseball that the team that has confidence is already a great way toward making it so.

"And it will take a lot more of them before the season is over.

"Jones is holding down second in everything, and between the way of [illegible] and knowledge that [illegible] Tom's worry in the game in the days when it was real battle to hang on and then we jumped the [illegible] pennant in the Braves's own sturdy outfield in the persons of the young men under their direction.

Both Faber and Robertson Will Pitch in This Series

Neither Faber nor Robertson got into the previous series here in Boston, but both will appear in the one as Gleason sees a chance to gain on the leaders in this particular [illegible]. The teams play four games closing the second western invasion of campaign.

Then the Sox go on the trails for a spell, and the dizzy Braves come back to try to return once again. It's a tough, rough season in these parts.

BIKERS BATTLE IN TITLE RACE AT REVERE

The field includes George Chapman, present champion; George Wiley and Chauncey Carman, both former champs, Percy Lawrence, Jackie Clarke, and the latest star of the pace followers, Vincent Markey.

All eyes will be focused on Champion George Chapman. His riding of late has been sensational and last Saturday he rode the greatest distance scored in an hour-race this year.

Markey is making his debut to-night. He is a youngster developed on the Southern tracks last Winter, and has been giving a good account of himself in New York and Philadelphia sources.

A striking European custom will be introduced at the finish of tonight's race. The winner will be crowned in a new red white and blue silk jersey. The laurel will be pinned on his breast, and he will then ride a "Victory" lap.

The winner will be the only rider in the world to wear a [illegible] jersey, there in this form until he sustains defeat in the championship.

ANOTHER WIN FOR SUMMERFIELD

The Summerfield B. B. Club shut out the strong Thayer McNeil team by a score of 7 to 0 before a large crowd on Boston Common. It was the ninth straight victory for Summerfield.

McLaughlin, the speedy pitcher, allowed but three hits. Moran, pitching for Thayer McNeil, was given poor support and could not hold down the bats of his opponents.

L. Roberts made a sensational game at second and the Lindy batting of Cimes was a great factor in the game. Williams has been playing big league baseball in the field.

Summerfield meets the crack Boston Postoffice M. V. S. nine at Ronan Park on Thursday evening and an interesting battle is looked for, as they are anxious to even things up for a defeat at the hands of the mail boys earlier in the season.

RUPERT HUGHES' GREATEST NOVEL

What Would YOU Do?

IF you were beautiful young Remember Steddon, a Massachusetts minister's daughter, whose sweetheart died before the wedding, would you try to bring up your baby among those who knew you in your own home town? Or would you run away for a fresh start with new surroundings? If you had your living to make, would you try to get into the movies? Dr. Bretherick, the family physician, advised Remember to go West. This she did, writing her parents a fictitious tale of having married and lost her "husband." She falls from a cliff and is told that the accident caused the death of her unborn child. Remember arrives in Los Angeles and determines to "pay the price" for a chance in the movies, but is refused. She is coached by Director Claymore and nearly loses her life in a storm scene. Father Steddon writes a scathing letter. This struggle of a young girl to work out her own salvation is stirringly told in Rupert Hughes' greatest novel. Go on with the story.

AND the letter from Her father proved to be a cup of poison when final it got to her mother's reluctant lips.

Dear Wife—The Lord hath and the Lord taketh away. I have lost you and my darling daughter and my heart is bowed in shame and loneliness, but I still can say "Thy will be done."

I think you would know such things are best, else you would not wish it. But I am afraid that the disciplining of you once more might result in the loss of sin and wisl to secure true repentance.

Bitterness filled my soul when I learned that she was living a life of ruin. I swear I wish I saw the p[illegible] that my heart in wanton [illegible] and that smirking [illegible] had it in my heart to curse her. I wrote in my haste. I repented my hardness of heart and bowed my head in humble shame when I read your angry reply. I had lost your love and your admiration, but that was deserved punishment for the idolatry that had grown up in my heart to you wardss and for the mistakes I must have made in not giving our erring daughter a better care.

But now it has pleased the Lord to pour out the vials of his wrath on my gray hairs. The old most gaze on the church fell due long ago, but foreclosure had been postponed from time to time. We gave a benefit to pay it off, but every body was too poor to respond, and it did not pay expenses.

The foreigner of the motion pic ture [illegible] here offered to share the profits on the showing of a picture in which, as he had the [illegible] to believe, Esther played a part. But while it would have done honor to [illegible] that we [illegible] have responded to [illegible] appeal. I felt that it would be a compromise with evil and I put Satan behind me and ordered the fellow out of the house.

Then I made a desperate appeal to our banker, Mr. Selpp, and he promised to do what he could for us. But the other day his bank was closed after a run upon it. He had previously mortgaged his house and sold his automobile—the one that killed the poor boy, Elwood Farnaby, whom you will remember as one of our choir. The banker was our only wealthy member and with him failed our last hope. The crops have been poor and the hard times have affected the local merchants so that parents have not been paid and the usual donations have been withheld.

There were no conversions at the last communion. Even the baptisms and the weddings that brought me an occasional little fee have been wanting.

The campaign we made to close the motion picture houses on Sunday was lost at the last election. We are fallen evil days.

What small religious enthusiasm is left in the town has been drawn away to other churches where there are younger ministers with more fashionable creeds and fresher oratory. I have not been spared overhearing cardinal and cruel remarks that I was too old to hold the pulpit any longer and should give way to a fresher mind; but I have not known where else to go, as I have had no calls from outside. And I could not—God forgive my vanity—I could not believe that I was yet too old to toil in the vineyard of the Lord. I have endured every other loss but that, and now the vineyard is closed.

The church is to be closed. We had no fire in the stove last Sunday and almost no worshipers were present. The sexton was ill and his graceless son refused to leave his bed.

What I shall do next or how take care of the little children that still cling to our home, the Lord has not yet told me in answer to my prayers. I still have faith that in his good time he will provide a way or call his servant home, and I hope you will not take this letter as a plea for pity. It is only to explain to you that if you should plan to return to the fold you will find the fold a ruin. I could not even send you the money for your railroad fare.

Mem's heart hurt intolerably as she thought over what her father had written.

There was a piece in the paper saying that the moving picture studios were also closing for lack of funds, and I wonder if my poor daughter has been turned out of the City of Pleasure in which she elected to spend her life. The rain falleth alike on the just and the unjust.

My cup is full and running over, but my chief dread is that unhappiness and want may be your portion as well as mine, and that I shall fall you utterly after providing so scantily for you all your days. I can only pray that my fears are the result of loneliness and age and weariness.

It has not been easy to write this, but it would have been dishonest not to let you know. For months I used to think, every time I heard the train whistle: Perhaps it brings my loved ones home. For the last few weeks I have feared that it might, lest I should have to welcome you to utter poverty. Even the oil is want ing to keep burning the lamp I used to set in the window every evening.

And now may the Lord shield you with his everpresent mercy, or at least give us the strength to understand that in all things he knoweth best.

Your loving Husband.

As she read this letter and saw back of the lines the hero and brows of her old father, saw the bald spot she had stared at from the choir loft, saw all the gnarled wrong headedness of the veteran saint, Mem's heart hurt intolerably. From her eyes fell streams of those tears that are had sold for so much apiece. Her face was blubbered and crumpled and soppy as in the crying contest for points.

Her old fashioned heartache and eye shower ended in an old flash and a hysterics of shrieking laughter, of farcical cynicism at the ridiculous sublimities of life she started her mother a crying, suddenly: "The Lord is an other Charlie Chaplin, mamma! He's just planted another kick where it do the most hurt."

Mem had been debating what make of car to buy, for were cheaper in price now, and with awful bargains were to be had in slightly used cars purchased by hardly used stars who could not complete the journalism or keep the gasoline tanks filled.

She had cried herself into money—not much, but a good deal considering the hard times, the general unemployment and her inexperience.

Bob had spent little of it. She had no time to shop or even to go down into the streets and stare in at the windows.

She had hardly found time to read the advertisements and study the fashion plates in the Sunday supplements.

Would car to buy and what new house to rent had been amusing conundrums for idle moments of running. And now those conundrums were solved. Her mother sobbed:

What on earth can I write the poor darling?"

Mom replied: "The answer is easy. I'm going to send him all the money I've got."

Her mother cried out against robbing one of her loves to pay another. It seemed a cruel shame to take the first bit of cash from her daughter and sell it to buy bread for her husband.

"You'll need it yourself. You may not have another job soon. You need new clothes and a rest."

"Rest and clothes can wait."

Her mother kept a miserable silence for a long while before she could say: "Your father will never accept money that you have earned from the pictures. You know him. He'd rather die. He'd rather the whole world would die."

This gave Mem only a brief pause. She answered simply:

"Doctor Brotherick got me into this business by making up the pack of lies he brought me out here. Now he can make up a few more and save poor daddy from desperation."

She sat down at once and wrote the doctor a letter, telling him what he must know already of her father's helplessness. She inclosed a money order for $50. She wrote a check at first, but she was afraid to have it put through the bank at Calverly, lest her father hear of it. She instructed the doctor to make up another of his scenarios about a repentant member of the congregation wishing to restore some stolen funds—and anything that his imagination could invent.

Then she set the wheels in motion to secure an immediate engagement with the next to the greatest comedian on the screen, Ned Link, a man whose private life was as solemn as his public life was frantic and foolish: whose personal dignity was as sacred as his professional dignity was degraded; a man of intellectuality, a reader of important books; a debater of art theories—but above all, a man afraid of nothing so much as he was afraid of love.

The Bermond Company was declaring another holiday, letting out much of its people as it was under contract, farming out such others as it could find places for in the shriveled market.

The public was not flocking to the pictures or to anything else. The exhibitors were losing money or closing down.

It was a period of dead calm and torpid seas. Wise men were trimming sails to the last breeze and jettisoning perilous cargo. The too courageous ones were sinking, vanishing, blowing up, dying of famine.

When Mem spoke to Bermond of her desire to play a comedy with Ned Link, Bermond leaped at the idea. It would take her off his salary list for weeks and it would help her fame. He was not altogether selfish. He arranged a dinner under the pretext of a private preview of Tom Holby's new picture. It was not yet in the final shape, but the producers were glad to lend it to Bermond.

There was a certain shame to her heart at bathing such a trap, but she felt now that she had a higher purpose than her personal ambition. She was working for her father and his church as well; and religious motive has always been a wondrous sedative to a conscience.

Bermond saved her the price of a gown by lending her a flashing Parisian miracle from his own big wardrobe. It was astounding to him as it was to Mem to find what a change clothes make in a soul. The simple things she had worn hitherto had once given her a simple modesty. In her first scenes she had been as bad as Miss Revan, forever pulling her skirts down. Her muscles remembered when her mind forgot. Kendrick had yelled to her once, "In Cora's name, Miss Steddon, forget your knees and don't advertise them by always covering them!"

WHEN A GIRL MARRIES

WITH eagerness I made no effort to mask. I caught up the big square letter lying on the table of the wide Silas mahogany hall. My glimpse of Jim's handwriting on the envelope made the tangle of problems the day had brought seem suddenly negligible. For a happy moment I could up the big square letter. I forgot.

As I turned toward the stairway Carlotta called me. I looked up to find her smiling at me with gentle understanding.

"Run along upstairs for a quiet hour, honey," she said in a muted voice full of rich understone. "This has been an emotional day for you. I'll be here ready to greet your dinner guest when she arrives. You can trust the entertainment of Miss Storrs to me for a while I'll tell Reeta not to announce dinner until 7:30, so you just take things easy."

With a word of thanks I hurried to my room, tore open Jim's letter and, running across to the window seat, the clearest light should illuminate every word, I began to read:

"Lilac Princess," the letter began.

"Lilac Princess." I could hear Jim mutter the love name. Way, way off trailing like a ghost through my mind was an echo of "Lilac Princess"—an echo I didn't like—as if I'd heard it parodied in a mocking voice. But without permitting the ghost to haunt me, I went on:

"My dear friend, Rosa Cordova, will mail this letter special delivery," it read. "She'll start it off to you the minute she reaches the big city when it won't have any telltale postmarks. So what I have to say to you about my little delegate ought to reach you a minute ahead of her. Anne, dear, this will introduce you to the earnest little sport and cleverest business woman I've ever come across. You will have a chance to get two separate angles on her. I recommend a study of both to you.

"As a shrewd level-headed woman with a man's brain you are going to deal with down in my office, you will take off your hat to her. As the aristocrat with charm and savoir faire who comes to live with you at Jessie's, you'll give her your heart. No one could resist her."

I stopped reading. Mechanically I removed my hat and cape. Listlessly I found a comfortable chair and pulled it into the shadows.

The first letter I've had from Jim for weeks. And I couldn't take it standing. I couldn't bear to stand with it in the full light of the waning day.

"Lilac Princess" it began—no more. And now I knew why there was a hint of mockery in the dear old love name Rosa Cordova had called me "White Lilac." Jim's love name isn't sacred to him if he can use it casually to any new acquaintance to whom he wants to give a description of his wife.

"Lilac Princess" my letter began with never a "dear" to soften it. Then it flung out in lavish praise of Rosa Cordova. I was afraid of what I'd read next.

After a minute I forced my eyes back to the letter, grimly rereading the sentence which had hurt me so.

"As the aristocrat with charm and savoir faire who comes to live with you at Jessie's, you'll give her your heart. No one could resist her."

Then I plodded on with none of the eagerness I had felt a little while before.

"I count on Virginia, of course. I can guess what she's been to you Dear Jeanie. I feel a tower of strength in her. We were so alike that in leaving her behind I feel as if my other self were there to think my thoughts. I can guess what my sister has been to you."

I laughed bitterly. Perhaps almost viciously. Then I went on

The Quick and Easy Way To Make Blackberry Jam

Makes Two-thirds More Jam from Same Amount of Fruit, and Never Fails

Uses Ripe Fruit, Takes Only One Minute's Boiling, and Saves All the Flavor and Color

Everyone who likes fresh blackberry pie will love good blackberry jam. Particularly when all the flavor of fresh ripe blackberries is preserved in the jam. Such blackberry jam is now possible in every home.

A new and never-failing method has now been discovered by which anyone can make the best quality quickly and very economically. With the Certo Process full-ripe blackberries are used—not unripe blackberries so necessary by the old method. The Certo Process retains all the rich flavor of this ripe fruit because it requires only one minute's boiling—not the 30 or more minutes required by the old method. This long boiling-down destroys huge and flat, and particularly kills the real blackberry taste. With Certo, therefore, the result is a far superior fruity flavor and two-thirds more jam from the same amount of fruit, because no juice is boiled away. It also banishes all guesswork or worry as perfect results are certain.

The new Certo process for making blackberry jam is very simple: Crush well in single layers about 2 quarts ripe berries, using wooden masher, crushing each berry and discarding all green parts. Add juice of 1 lemon. Measure 4 level cups (2½ lbs.) crushed berries, including lemon juice, into large kettle. Add 7½ levelled cups (3½ lbs.) sugar and mix well. Stir hard and constantly and bring to a vigorous boil over the hottest fire. Boil hard for one full minute with continual stirring. Remove from fire and add ½ bottle (scant half cup) Certo, stirring it in well. From the time jam is taken off fire allow to stand 5 minutes only, by the clock, before pouring. In the meantime skim, and stir occasionally to cool slightly. Then pour quickly. Makes 10 half-pound glasses of jam. To make Certo blackberry jelly, see Certo Book of Recipes.

Important: Best way to seal Jams and Jellies in open glasses. Cover while hot with thin coat of paraffin. Next day add tablespoonful hot paraffin to seal cracks around edge formed by shrinkage on cooling.

Certo is a pure fruit product—contains no gelatine or preservative. It positively saves time, fruit, flavor of ripe fruit, and guesswork. It makes all kinds of jams and jellies with fresh or canned fruit—some you have never made before. It is highly endorsed by all cooking experts who have used it. Every woman who tries it recommends it to her friends and says she'll never be without it. And Certo jams and jellies keep as well as any other made. Get a bottle of Certo and recipe book from your grocer or druggist at once. For extra free copies of Certo Book of Recipes, write Pectin Sales Co., Inc., Rochester, N. Y.

Start the new—the sure, quick, economical way of making jams and jellies. You'll never return to the old "hit or miss" method.

If your grocer or druggist does not have Certo, please telephone Miss Dwyer, Ft. Hill 1014 to learn where to obtain it.

Landru—His Secret Love Affairs

First Authentic Story of French Bluebeard, Who Won 283 Women, Written By William Le Queux

By WILLIAM LE QUEUX

(Former Criminologist and Author of "The Fifth Finger," "The Four Faces," "Tracked by Wireless," etc.

LANDRU, that greatest of all love criminals, easily and quickly turned from one murder to another. He assayed to drug Nina Langlois with chocolates, but the first few had little effect. Therefore he pressed two more chocolates upon her, and after she had eaten them he said:

"It is a glorious night, my darling Nina. Let us have a motor run into the country. Afterwards I will take you back to your sister at Grenelle."

The girl, now only half conscious, consented, and a quarter of an hour later, he helped her into the seat at his side and they were soon speeding away across the Place de la Concorde and out of the city.

The night was dark, the moon being hidden behind a bank of cloud, but Landru drove on at high speed through the suburbs, and until they came to the old town of Pontoise, where, taking the left hand road which runs for miles along the bank of the Oise, he continued as far as the village of Beaumont.

Having listened intently for five minutes or so, in order to satisfy himself that there was no one in the vicinity of that dark, desolate spot, he roughly pulled off the girl's hat and took off her scarf and jacket. These, together with her handbag, he laid carefully upon the river bank in such a position that they could be seen by any passerby. His idea was to give the crime the appearance of suicide. Having slipped off his boots so that he should leave no footprints, he lifted the girl's unconscious form from the car. First, he placed her upon her feet upon the soft ground in order that her footprints might remain there. Then, carrying her to the bank, he calmly let her slide into the deep, fast-running water, without making the slightest sound.

He sprang into the car and had moved slowly along without switching on the light, when suddenly two men sprang out of the darkness and commanded him to stop.

CHAPTER IV.
EXPERIMENTS WITH POISON AND GERMS.

LANDRU'S fearlessness and daring when cornered was one of his outstanding characteristics.

When challenged by the two men, he realized a sudden peril, whereupon he drove his car straight at them, causing them to jump aside, and continued his way. As he had no lights the men could not distinguish any number or the make of car.

Two kilometres further along, he came to the broad high-road again, and turning to the right, switched on the lights and drove straight back to Paris.

The men, on their part, alarmed the police, and search was made; but on the discovery of the girl's hat, coat and bag, the rural constable put it down to suicide, and believed that the motorist was merely passing by.

Next day search was made in the river, but not until four days later was the body of the poor girl, Nina Langlois, recovered.

But already Monsieur Raymond Lenoir of the Chateau des Grands Vignes, at Frocourt had presented at the bank the girl's authority to draw her four thousand three hundred francs, and had been paid. The police were greatly on the alert, but though they searched for many months, Monsieur Lenoir was never found—until quite recently—in the person of Henri Landru.

For that reason the story I have just related, with others that I will later on disclose, was not presented by the prosecution at the trial.

Landru never let the grass grow beneath his feet. Madame Labord-Line was held in the hollow of his hand as an easy pigeon to be plucked whenever necessary.

Therefore he turned his attention to a fair prize which had been recently attracting him, and he laid a plot which, for callousness and deep cunning, it would be difficult to find a parallel in the criminal history of the world.

Only four days had elapsed since the cold-blooded murder of the farmer's daughter when, at four o'clock one afternoon, the man of mystery was changing his clothes in his small, but well-furnished,

THE STORY SO FAR

Landru's early life is described by M. Le Queux in the opening chapter of his story of the world's greatest love criminal. After years of petty swindling he turned his attention to victimising women, making love to them, getting control of their property, and then killing them. Mme. Cuchet was one of the first. Landru poisoned her and her son Andre in a villa rented with her money and burned their bodies in a furnace. He then made love to Mme. Labord-Line. Meanwhile the police investigated his activities.

Landru had a way of saving mementos of his victims. This picture shows police official examining the contents of one of the Bluebeard's rooms. Note the quantity of women's false hair, the trinkets and letters on the table.

bedroom in the Rue des Petits-Champs, the window of which looked down upon the narrow Paris street which, as you know, runs from the Rue de la Paix along to the rear of the Palais Royal.

He had put on a smart dark-blue suit, brushed his beard carefully, and in his mirror satisfied himself of his appearance in which as a perfect lover, he always took the greatest pride. While at Lyons he had written to Madame Labord-Line telling her that he must be absent for some time, the actual truth being that he had postponed the end he had in view for her because he deemed it highly dangerous for the moment to take any woman to Vernouillet. His intended to deal with her—later!

The young war-widow Nadand had, to his satisfaction, fallen an easy victim, hence he had decided upon a truly diabolical method of sending her to her grave. As a matter of fact, he was about to try a new experiment, and with that object he had some time before procured from a drunken and disreputable medical student—whose friendship he had for many weeks been cultivating with that sole object—a small hermetically sealed tube.

This, after drawing the curtains and switching on the light, he took from its secret place of concealment—a small, well-disguised cavity behind the skirting board under the window—a cavity where, in reposed several small mysterious phials, a big revolver, a half-mask of black silk, and one or two latest implements, which were, in reality, an up-to-date burglar's kit, together with one or two relics which, if they ever fell into the hands of the police, must inevitably connect him with more than one mystery of Paris.

But their secret hiding place was most cunningly contrived, so would certainly escape even the most rigorous search.

Taking the little tube between his fingers, he held it up to the light, revealing it to be three-parts filled with a pale-yellow jelly-like substance.

He carried it into the cosy salle-a-manger—where the table was already laid for two, and placed it in a cup of hot water, which dissolved the jelly into a liquid. Then, tying a wet handkerchief across his mouth and nose and putting on a pair of gloves, he took a clean liqueur-glass, and breaking the tube, allowed the liquid to flow into the glass, instantly covering it with a piece of blotting paper, and carrying the fragments of broken tube to the burning stove, into which he carefully placed them for destruction.

By his actions it was plain that the liquid, whatever it might be, was highly dangerous to human life, and that he himself was afraid of its effects.

On the buffet stood a plated basket containing a bunch of magnificent grapes, and also another containing half-a-dozen very fine Tangerine oranges, which he had bought in the boulevard an hour before.

Seating himself at the buffet, the handkerchief still across his face, and wearing his gloves, he took out a hypodermic syringe from its little case, and with it injected some drops of mysterious fluid into each grape, sealing the puncture by means of a fine, camel-hair brush, dipped in some chemical substance. The grapes being all thus treated, he turned his attention to the oranges, in each of which he made six injections, carefully sealing them.

This work he accomplished in silence, with a demoniacal grin upon his sinister countenance.

Suddenly, as though by an afterthought, he took from a drawer a small piece of cotton wool, and dipping it in the liqueur-glass he rubbed it over the soup spoon and beside the place prepared for his victim? watching it until it dried, leaving no trace.

Then, with a grunt of satisfaction, he carried to the stove the liqueur glass, syringe, camel-hair brush, cotton wool, and indeed everything he had used, including his gloves, placing them all in, and reclosing the round iron lid.

Afterwards he opened the windows wide, to allow a current of air, and then, having removed the handkerchief from his mouth, he carefully washed both hands, also his face and beard, with carbolic soap.

Ten minutes later he went forth to one of his favorite haunts, an obscure little cafe in the Rue du mail, where he drank a "demi-blonde" and had a chat and a joke with Emile, the thin, white-aproned waiter. Afterwards he went to a florist in the Rue de Clery, where he spent 10 francs on flowers, and returning, he decorated the table for the benefit of his victim.

Landru's pretended passion was for birds and flowers. He posed as a lover of nature, but at heart had no concern with it. His one and sole sordid object was money, and nothing prevented him from obtaining it—even the sacrifice of human life itself.

He held all women in supreme contempt and laughed at their sighs of love. His own kisses were, indeed, too often the seal of doom.

At half-past five the old widow Amelot, who cooked for him and kept his rooms tidy, arrived, as she did each evening, carrying with her what she had brought for the evening meal.

"I have a lady coming to dinner," he told her. "It must be nice. I leave it to you to get some extras."

"Tres bein, m'sieur," replied the bent old dame, her head wrapped in a black woolen shawl, for her master had many lady friends at his love-nest, and she knew from experience how to provide for them. So she set to work and cooked quite a nice little dinner.

When the young war-widow arrived she found a well-laid table for two, with spring flowers, spotless linen and shining silver. Her newly-found friend welcomed her, and kissed her ardently as soon as the door was closed.

"Ah! my darling Gabrielle," he sighed. "This is indeed most delightful! We shall spend a happy evening together. After dinner we will go somewhere—to the new revue at the Casino de Paris—if you like. I hear it is excellent."

"No," replied the fascinated widow. "I would far rather spend the time here quietly with you to talk things over and arrange matters. Unless, of course, you want to go out—eh?"

"Your every wish, my dearest, is my command," was the accomplished's gallant response, as he lit a cigarette and gazed at his victim through the blue, curling smoke.

They sat down to dinner—just clear soup, fish and an entree, as is served in every middle-class household in Paris. The young war-widow drank only water. Had she drank wine, Landru's experiment would have been so much easier.

They sat facing each other, and as she used that spoon to take her soup, the arch-fiend was seized with a sudden remorse—but only for a few moments. He had not himself deliberately to kill her by such insidious and diabolical means that even he—the poisoner of Madame Cuchet and her son Andre—now hesitated.

He knew quite well the consequences of taking soup with that spoon, and he also knew that she liked grapes. If she took any, then death was inevitable, deaths by means which could never be traced to his hand—causes that nobody in the world would charge him with having produced—for

"Tres bein, m'sieur," replied the bent old dame, her head wrapped in a black woolen shawl, for her master had many lady friends at his love-nest, and she knew from experience how to provide for them. So she set to work and cooked quite a nice little dinner.

When the young war-widow arrived she found a well-laid table for two, with spring flowers, spotless linen and shining silver. Her newly-found friend welcomed her, and kissed her ardently as soon as the door was closed.

"Ah! my darling Gabrielle," he sighed. "This is indeed most delightful! We shall spend a happy evening together. After dinner we will go somewhere—to the new revue at the Casino de Paris—if you like. I hear it is excellent."

"No," replied the fascinated widow. "I would far rather spend the time here quietly with you to talk things over and arrange matters. Unless, of course, you want to go out—eh?"

"Your every wish, my dearest, is my command," was the accomplished's gallant response, as he lit a cigarette and gazed at his victim through the blue, curling smoke.

They sat down to dinner—just clear soup, fish and an entree, as is served in every middle-class household in Paris. The young war-widow drank only water. Had she drank wine, Landru's experiment would have been so much easier.

They sat facing each other, and as she used that spoon to take her soup, the arch-fiend was seized with a sudden remorse—but only for a few moments. He had not himself deliberately to kill her by such insidious and diabolical means that even he—the poisoner of Madame Cuchet and her son Andre—now hesitated.

He knew quite well the consequences of taking soup with that spoon, and he also knew that she liked grapes. If she took any, then death was inevitable, deaths by means which could never be traced to his hand—causes that nobody in the world would charge him with having produced—for she would succumb to a natural and fatal malady.

Already the pretty young woman was doomed. She had taken her soup with the spoon which, with his devilish ingenuity, he had rendered deadly, and now no medical assistance would avail to save her from the disease. The furniture in her handsome flat would be his, for had she not already assigned it to him by her own signature—as security for a supposed debt—a fact which she had never noted in the deed she had signed!

That momentary remorse having passed, Landru became bright and amusing, relating to his visitor some humorous anecdotes, and eating his dinner with a relish.

More and more fascinated became the young widow by her new friend's charming manner. He was amusing her out of a serious difficulty, and even if marriage did not result, she felt she had found a true friend. To her he revealed the artistic and poetic side of his nature, for as they sat there at that fatal repast he became romantic, and quoted verses from his favorite de Musset, and recited to her the greater part of de Vigny's poem "Dolorida," which commences:

"Estce la Volupte qui, pour ses deux mysteres Purifiyer, s'allume ces lampes solitaries?"

She sat listening entranced at the even cadence of his soft, musical voice, all unconscious that the Hand of Death had already been laid upon her.

Presently the assassin rose, and, taking the two silver baskets containing the fruit from the buffet, placed them upon the table.

"May I offer you some grapes?" he asked, with that exquisite politeness which he so frequently assumed towards his victims, and she, finding the fruit so tempting, clipped off a small portion of the bunch.

"How beautiful they are!" she exclaimed sincerely, and next moment placed one in her mouth.

"Yes," he admitted. "But, personally, I never eat fruit. It does not agree with me," he added, with sinister meaning.

At that moment the old serving-woman entered with coffee, but scarcely had she gone when there came a ring at the door, and the old woman announced that Mme. Juvanon had called.

In a second he recognized the name as that of a dowdyish obscure actress, with red hair, living at Courbevoix, with whom he had a few months before been in negotiation for the sale of some jewelry to old Lepic, the thieves' "fence," out at St. Denis. There was no harm in the two women meeting; therefore, he ordered her to be shown in, and welcomed her warmly.

When a fillet of fish is wanted quickly for a child's dinner, there is no nicer or quicker way of cooking it than to place a tiny dab of margarine in the centre of the fillet, add a wee bit of salt; then roll the fillet neatly, wrap it in a butter or margarine paper, and cook it in a brisk oven for about ten minutes. Remove paper and serve with thin bread and butter or mashed potato.

DO YOU EAT ENOUGH

—By Brice Belden, M. D.—

THE physical and intellectual efficiency of the human race is lessened wherever undernutrition exists. The ability to do manual labor is interfered with as a first result. Fatigue comes on more rapidly than it normally would.

Even people leading sedentary lives are markedly weakened when undernourished as regards the muscular activities necessary for the purposes of life. The love of sport and of roaming about is lost, children cease to play, and a person avoids as far as possible all bodily exertion.

Through the power of the will, or by reason of some extraordinary inspiration, undernourished individuals may overcome the sensation of fatigue for a certain length of time in order to accomplish a definite result, as exemplified by military exploits. But the accomplishment of work in the dull, monotonous grind of civilian life is a very different matter.

The ability to do mental work finally suffers. Under ordinary circumstances the assimilation of food and the expenditure of muscular energy are increased by the love of accomplishment, the power of performance, and the note of personal initiative, but when there is undernourishment these phenomena are absent. There is such listlessness that an intellectual worker may have to perform his tasks in bed.

Malnutrition is known to be widespread among children and adults alike, and poverty is by no means the only cause of this condition. Undernourishment has been noted by Blunt and Bauer of the University of Chicago among college students, and Emerson, of Boston, has observed it very frequently among the children of the rich.

AN interesting collar treatment by a puff of fabric and a fringe of monkey fur distinguishes this slender Lelong coat of black satin. Another unusual note is the cording that ascends the wide sleeves and crosses the back of the shoulders. The neckline is irregular, and achieves the new extreme length at one point.

BANDS of material applied on very thin voile, with an openwork effect, form the capelet and border of this Jenny cape of dark blue crepe de chine. This has been successfully developed in other combinations of fabrics.

House Slippers

Last Easter, I left the house in plenty time for church, so that I might be able to procure a front seat.

However, when I arrived a goodly number were already seated.

Imagine my embarrassment when, on glancing down at my feet, I found I had on house slippers.

"SAGE BRUSH TRAIL"
Evans Productions

Larry ..... Roy Stewart
Mary ..... Marjorie Daw
Nell ..... Johnnie Harron
Jose ..... Wallace Beery

Story and continuity by H. H. Van Loan. Directed by Robert Thornby.

AT Loew's Orpheum this week Roy Stewart stars in a "red-blooded, he-man" role in "The Sage Brush Trail," a tale of the southwestern desert where he, single-handed, keeps a townful of "bad men" within the law. That is, Roy Stewart is the hero of the piece, but as Majorie Daw, Johnnie Harron, and Wallace Beery comprise the rest of the cast, it seems unfair to call him the star. They're all stars.

Western stories are all pretty much alike, but even their sameness holds interest. "The Sage Brush Trail" is a trifle above the average, especially in view of the acting. The story is not very heavy, but that's a recommendation in itself this weather.

On Thursday the bill changes, and Gladys Walton will be the film attraction in "The Trouper."

MARIE PREVOST CHOSEN.

MARIE PREVOST has been picked for the role of Gloria Gilbert in Warner Brothers' film version of the F. Scott Fitzgerald novel, "The Beautiful and Damned," and for an important role—probably that of Marjorie—in the screen production of Charles Norris' best-seller, "Brass."

DOROTHY GISH FOR "FURY."

ALL THOSE who have been waiting in more or less impatience for word of Dorothy Gish's future plans will be relieved to hear that she is all set for the lead with Richard Barthelmess in that gentleman's next picture, "Fury." Production will start soon, but the film will not be released until Winter.

TWO GIRLS IN HOLLYWOOD

ONE of the most astonishing stories that have come out of the West since the movies have put Hollywood on the map of the United States is involved in the crucial little statement that "Helen Jerome Eddy is to be starred in a series of picture productions by Ray Carol, which will be released through Robertson-Cole."

Such announcements are made daily and can pass unnoticed. In this case, however, there is a story attached to it. Four years ago two girls Helen Jerome Eddy and Ray Carol, went out to Hollywood to break into the movies. That former to become a star and the latter a writer. They met and decided to work it out together.

They had the usual up and down luck. Sometimes things went well and sometimes they didn't. At last they felt they were ready to go ahead. A few weeks ago they pooled their incomes, and Miss Carol went to the Robertson Cole Company and came home with one of the best releasing contracts that firm has given out. They are making their first picture now and it is written, directed, and supervised by Ray Carol and played by Helen Jerome Eddy.

MAE MARSH STORY

"FLAMES OF PASSION," is the title given to the thrilling production in which Mae Marsh is to be starred in. The picture will be longer than our usual requirements, and will have a splendid cast of English players in support of the American

SPEAKING OF EDDY AND CAROL

THE first picture of the Carol-Eddy unit, of which I spoke above, will be "Love's Coming of Age," by Mae Tinee. Hamilton Ford has signed up for the lead opposite Helen Jerome Eddy, while William A. Seiter will direct, and not that author.

JACQUELINE LOGAN SIGNS

JACQUELINE LOGAN has signed on the dotted line to play the lead with George Larkin in the Russell production, "Saved by Radio"—nothing if not timely.

The supporting cast includes Harry Northrup, Andrew Arbuckle and Monta Collins.

CHARLIE'S NEXT.

"SINGED WINGS," and under-world story by Katherine Burt, will serve as Bebe Daniels' next vehicle. Penrhyn Stanlaws will direct.

STATE HONORS DEAD WAR CHAPLAINS

With tender memory, the State today paid homage to the four Massachusetts chaplains who gave their lives in the war which the American people waged in the cause of humanity.

A bronze memorial tablet was dedicated in their honor in the third floor section of the State House that will be known hereafter as the Hall of Fame.

Cardinal O'Connell, Bishop Lawrence and other church dignitaries attended while on the fringe of the crowd there stood an respectful attention scores of the young soldiers who man to man had braved the rigors of war with heroic chaplains on the battlefields of France.

The symbolic design of the memorial represents a dying Massachusetts soldier who has been carried by two chaplains to the protecting structure of a shell-hole, where with serious face they tenderly support and minister to him as his life ebbs away.

"Where shells burst and men fell torn and bleeding they calmly ministered, heroic witnesses of the power of the faith they preached," is the simple inscription on the memorial.

Thus the State honored:

REV. WALTON S. DANKER

"The first American chaplain killed in action. Captain Danker was one of 116 men given the War Cross by France for heroism in the Argonne Woods. He fell in action, mortally wounded by a shell, June 14, 1918. He was buried where he fell, but his body has since been returned to Worcester, where he was a pastor when the war began.

REV. FR. JOHN B. DeVALLES

"The Angel of the Trenches. Lieutenant De Valles was the first Catholic chaplain decorated for bravery. Eight times in one day he went over the top to bring in wounded soldiers who were beyond where the rescue squad was permitted to go. Gassed and wounded at Bois Brule, and broken in health, he was ordered home to recuperate. Father DeValles refused to leave the boys and when the war was over disease had fastened itself upon him too firmly to be conquered. He died at New Bedford, six hours after Congress had awarded him the Medal of Honor.

REV. FR. WILLIAM F. DAVITT

The last American officer killed in the war. He was instantly killed five minutes before the armistice. He was with the first American troops on German soil. His decoration by the French government reads: 'He worked interruptedly under violent fire with total disregard of danger." Father Davitt was born in Holyoke and was located at Worcester at the outbreak of war.

REV. FR. SIMON A. O'ROURKE

Father O'Rourke was born and reared in Fall River. He enlisted as a naval chaplain on July 15, 1918. Denied the glory of death on the field of battle, he died at the Boston Navy Yard during the influenza epidemic. His strength and health wasted by his ministrations, day and night, in behalf of his suffering comrades.

The memorial was presented by the Rev. Roland D. Sawyer in behalf of the State Memorial Commission, and was accepted for the people of the State by Governor Coz.

STRIKES HAVE LITTLE EFFECT ON SAVINGS

Providence, July 19.—Current strikes have not affected savings deposits in State banks, trust companies and savings banks in Rhode Island. Savings deposits on June 30 were $13,413,127 more than a year ago that date, according to a statement of Bank Commissioner George H. Newhall, who says that the increase is very large in view of the unsettled conditions.

BOSTON AMERICAN

Largest Evening Circulation in New England—July 19, 1922

The Boston Elevated Railway was put under State control of five trustees for a term of ten years by a special act in 1918.

Right of Pennsylvania to Tax Outgoing Coal

The Pennsylvania constitution forbids the railroads from holding any interest in the coal mines of Pennsylvania. The railroads have defied the constitution of Pennsylvania for years and held the control of the hard coal mines, making in this, as in about everything else, a farce of our laws in their application to railroads and other powerful corporations.

These roads are responsible for the enormous price of hard coal. To mine the coal and deliver it to the railroads only costs less than a quarter of what is charged us.

Now comes another burden, this time imposed by the State of Pennsylvania herself. That State, not content with allowing her constitution to be openly violated and flouted by the railroads and thus permitting unconscionable prices to be extorted from the consumers of hard coal throughout the country, now proceeds to impose an export tax upon that coal for her own benefit and we suppose in order to allow the mine owners and the railroads to tack on a further increase.

This is the situation today. We are threatened not only with a scarcity of coal, but with a great increase in price.

Has the State of Pennsylvania the power under our National Constitution to levy that tax? Governor Cox doubts it. He has, therefore, instructed the Attorney General to bring suit in the United States Supreme Court to test the power of the State of Pennsylvania to levy that tax upon all the rest of the country.

We are very glad indeed that he has taken this action, and we hope that the Attorney General will engage some one with the capacity to prosecute it with vigor and ability. We do not want to have to face next Winter with another great increase in the price of coal.

Wholesale Dog Killing

Slaughter of Unlicensed Animals by the Low Recalls Senator Vest's Classic Eulogy

The report to the Mayor of three constables that they have killed in the last year nearly 4,000 dogs which were unlicensed astonishes us.

We wonder whether or not any effort was made before these dogs were executed to find their owners or whether it was a brutal, ruthless slaughter.

The dog is not a natural outlaw. He has been a friend of man since time out of memory. One of the English classics is a defence of a dog before a jury in the State of Missouri by United States Senator Vest. Because it is a classic and will do you good to read even if you do not care for dogs, we print it herewith:

Gentlemen of the Jury: The best friend a man has in this world may turn against him and become his enemy. His son and daughter that he has reared with loving care may become ungrateful. Those who are nearest and dearest to us, those whom we trust with our happiness and our good name, may become traitors to their faith. The money that a man has he may lose. It flies away from him when he may need it most. Man's reputation may be sacrificed in a moment of ill considered action. The people who are prone to fall on their knees and do us honor when success is with us may be the first to throw the stone of malice when failure settles its cloud upon our heads. The one absolutely unselfish friend a man may have in this selfish world, the one that never deserts him, the one that never proves ungrateful or treacherous, is the dog.

Gentlemen of the Jury: A man's dog stands by him in prosperity and poverty, in health and in sickness. He will sleep on the cold ground, when the wintry winds blow and the snow drives fiercely, if only he may be near his master's side. He will kiss the hand that has no food to offer, he will lick the wounds and sores that come in encounter with the roughness of the world. He guards the sleep of his pauper master as if he were a prince.

When all other friends desert, he remains. When riches take wings and reputation falls to pieces he is as constant in his love as the sun in its journey through the heavens. If fortune drives the master forth an outcast into the world, friendless and homeless, the faithful dog asks no higher privilege than that of accompanying him, to guard him against danger, to fight against his enemies, and when the last scene of all comes and death takes his master in its embrace and his body is laid away in the cold ground, no matter if all other friends pursue their way, there by his graveside will the noble dog be found, his head between his paws and his eyes sad, but open in alert watchfulness, faithful and true even to death.

Compulsory Morality

Does It Strike In?

Copyright, 1922, Star Co.

Nine young men guilty of disorderly conduct are ordered by the judge to go to church on Sunday for twenty-six weeks. Also they must read "good, useful books from the public library," and, "stay at home every night unless permitted to go out by the probation officer."

What do you think of that judicial sentence? It is probably legal, although there is nothing in the law books about sentencing a man to church or sentencing him to read good books. But that is not important.

Our judges occasionally must try experiments.

But is the book read or the sermon heard BY COMPULSION apt to be beneficial? It would be interesting to see a list of the "good books" that these young men get from the library on the judge's order. Make men want to read good books. Then you have made the right start.

A Black Snake Well Used

Who Beats a Child Should Have a Beating

Copyright, 1922, Star Co.

A woman's child was beaten by a school teacher—"paddled," as the teacher put it. He said the child was disobedient.

The mother called upon the teacher with a black snake whip, and with that whip did some excellent work.

"The case will be dropped," naturally, but the black snake whip should not have been dropped so soon.

A nation that punishes a man caught whipping a disobedient horse in the street should be ashamed of a teacher whipping a child. An assault is no less criminal and should be considered no less illegal because an assault is committed against a weak child by a powerful man.

Waiting—That's All

The Voice of New England

Gaston Denies Report

Editor Boston American:

The news article in the Boston Post to the effect that I inspired the Legal Aid Society to sue Sherman L. Whipple in connection with the Greene case is unfounded. I have had nothing to do with this suit against Mr. Whipple and knew nothing of the matter until I read the report in the daily press. Will you please contradict this suggestion in the Post, which evidently proceeds from malicious sources?

WILLIAM A. GASTON.

Talking "Turkey"

Editor Boston American:

Nothing could have been much better than the public letter about Hays and the Arbuckle case which appeared in your paper a few days ago. What I can't understand is why a plain, evident truth like that gets held up until somebody, evidently too exasperated to keep quiet any longer, talks "turkey."

Free Woodpile

Editor Boston American:

The Boston American always has opposed waste, and advocated measures in the interest of the poor and working class.

In the Shipping Board vessels, which were recently burned in the harbor to secure the old metal which they contained, were many hundreds of cords of good fuel, that would have brought comfort and employment to many of Boston's needy. If there had been anybody to take the initiative. If the city or a public-spirited citizen were to purchase the hulls, place them where they would be accessible and permit any who would to cut them up for the wood which they contained, there would be hundreds who would benefit by the opportunity.

As on a public dump, there should be a man to see that the privilege was not abused. Wayfarers, instead of sawing wood that cost $15 per cord at the Chardon Street Home, could earn a little money converting a waste into a marketable product. The old metal would also be salvaged and would be in better condition than when burned out. The plan properly worked out need cost not a penny and would benefit many who need help.

Fares of Bundles

Editor Boston American:

During the past few years the residents of this city and its suburbs have been anxiously and impatiently awaiting the long-drawn-out decision of the executive board of the Boston Elevated Railway which will proclaim a permanent five-cent fare for this city.

I am aware of the fact that there are many people of Boston who have something to relate in connection with the campaign being conducted by your helpful newspaper, but I, a citizen of Boston, am desirous of describing a rather absurd incident which I encountered with the other day while riding on a street car in a nearby suburban Hub city.

As has been my usual custom upon boarding a street car in this city, I dropped ten cents in the coin box. I was greatly surprised to hear the conductor ask me to drop another ten-cent piece in the box to account for the bundle which I had with me. He said that this rule was adopted some time ago by the executives of the road. It is bad enough for the people to pay ten cents for their own personal transportation.

EAGER FOR A 5-CENT FARE.

CONDEMN THE SIN, BUT PITY THE SINNER

By Dr. Charles Fleischer.

BE sorry for the other sinner.

Not because none of us is so very good and we should, therefore, have the fellow failing that ought to make us very kind; but because that is the just and spiritual attitude.

Condemn the sin, but pity the sinner.

Not that you should sentimentalize over him—or her. For society is not safe without holding its members to full moral accountability.

Public opinion must give solid support to all law, civic and moral.

Besides, each of us needs the stiffening influence of the highest, continuous demand upon our own moral nature, else our sense of right and wrong is likely to grow weak and flabby, and we lose our power of ethical discrimination or the will to give it effect.

And yet we repeat: condemn the sin, but pity the sinner.

Consider the case of a charming young forger who appears somehow to have contracted the habit of forging checks.

This Miss X has recently been jailed again for three thousand dollars of forgeries against her latest employer, this being her regular performance as a trusted employe.

Indeed, her one specialty in crime (we are all specialists in virtues and vices) is forgery. She prides herself—and properly—upon not using the "easiest way" to secure the money for the luxuries she craves.

That to her would be shameful and dirty. But she is not ashamed—nor is she proud—of her own type of wrongdoing.

She indulges in forgery not as a habit, but as a sporadic, periodic indulgence. As another woman might—and apparently as innocently—indulge in a box of candy.

The fair forger's craving is frankly confessed to be for luxurious living, fine clothes, excellent food, a maid's attentions, the frequenting of hotels, restaurants and resorts where she can mingle freely with the best society.

When her money gives out, she commits her favorite crime, duly is discovered and jailed, serves her sentence, goes where she is unknown, secures another job as a trusted secretary, duly is seized by her craving for luxury, forgives again and so—continuous the swing around her vicious circle.

All this, it would seem, without twinges of conscience and with apparent pride in the artistry of her performance.

Queer freak, isn't it? She has been psycho-analyzed and found sane. Perhaps she is. Anyhow, society in self-protection and for her own good must hold the girl responsible and punish her.

In due time she may fall into the hands of a fuller sufficiently kind and wise and inspired to cure her of this moral sickness and to educate her into ethical health.

We are too sympathetic to wish to take a census of the millions of women, unmarried and married, who sell themselves at least in part—in body or in peace of mind—to satisfy this same craving for luxury, for what they do not need, have not earned, should not have.

Condemn the sin, but pity the sinner.

If This Is Your Birthday

You Are LUCKY

THESE are the masters of destiny born this day and the men and women who are known to others only by the powers they hold over them. They are self-sufficient in all respects and mould their lives and the lives of others to their own advantage.

Today is of good fortune until 5 p. m. Try to complete as many undertakings as possible before that time.

A child born today will be healthy but nervous and restless in disposition—a child that will respond only to sympathetic treatment.

Famous persons born today:

Julius Caesar.

Felix Walker—Soldier and pioneer.

Samuel Colt—Inventor of the revolver.

Bishop John J. Hennessey.

DO YOU GIVE VALUABLE PRAISE?

When the employes give you exceptionally good service, if you are a customer of the firm, you could do the individuals a good turn by mentioning the fact to the boss or to the man who is in charge.

If a clerk shows unusual interest in you, you can greatly benefit that person by mentioning the fact to his or her superior.

This holds good for all classes of employes.

You are not at all backward about making a complaint when you do not get the service you feel you are entitled to, so why not be as free with praise?

It is courteous to personally compliment the person who has done something to please you, but it might be of more practical value if you told your satisfaction to the man who employs the one who has so splendidly served you.

An employe of whom there is a certain favorable report comes in for a certain amount of special notice from the firm, superintendent or the foreman or the heads of the firm, and it puts the one in line for advancement when a good worker is needed higher up.

SEEN AND HEARD

THE emergency man of the Newton and Watertown Gas Company was sent out on a hurry call to a Newton Highlands house recently, when a report of a leak came in. Arriving at the house he failed to get a gas odor. The housewife insisted, however. After a thorough examination the emergency man again said she was mistaken. "Did you ever smell the ink on a newspaper just off the press?" asked the E. M. "Why sure," said the housewife, "my husband is a newspaperman and brings home all the Boston papers each evening." An idea struck the gas man. "Where does he put the papers?" he asked. "Right over there on the couch," said she. Lifting the papers the gas man stooped, smelled and called out: "Here's your 'gas' leak." The couch had absorbed the ink smell and this was what the family thought was a gas leak.

Blueblouds back to Beacon Hill. A first-hand census made by the Social Service students at Boston University shows that many of the old first families who moved out to Beacon street and Commonwealth avenue several years ago, are now moving back to the hill. The influx of "unmannered noveau riche" and the prevalence of a growing "red light" district are the blunt reasons assigned for change.

Not in our family! Attention, scholars of the classics and those interested in divorce proceedings: MADAME X was suing her husband for divorce. She was reputed to be well educated and worth several income tax blanks. So was he.

"What did the doctor suggest?" asked the lawyer.

"He told me to get a modus vivendi."

"Did you?"

"No. I never had anything like that in my family."

Suburban merchants are using some novel expedients to entice trade. Line formed in front of Bowdoin street, Dorchester, delicatessen store when it was announced a pound of potato salad would be given every customer. And a cafe on Warren street, Roxbury, for two hours every Saturday, gave a free meal to every tenth customer.

Overheard on floor of Boston Stock Exchange:

First Broker (eagerly scanning financial page of Boston American)—"Just look at this Detroit dispatch. Wouldn't the output of flivvers for you?"

Second Broker—"From my experience in one, I'll say it would!"

It takes the joy right out of life,
And cuts your feelings like a knife;
Why is it when you want to show
Your friends your brand-new radio
This is how it's sure to go!
"R-r-r-bz-r-r-s-s-bzo!"

Cat-o'-nine tails are now in full bloom in Bay State swamps. Time was when no New England parlor was considered suitfitted without a bunch of cat-o-nine tails, either dried in their natural dark brown or covered with gold paint. Boys today declare the blooms have quite gone out of fashion, and that they are no longer to be sold to passing auto parties or Summer visitors.

GARRETT P. SERVISS ON STERESCOPIC RAYS

"Would you kindly explain, in a layman's way, why we see in a stereoscope the depth which is not reproduced in a photograph?"—V. T., New York.

BECAUSE the lenses of the stereoscope bend the rays of light from the two slightly divergent pictures placed in the focus in such a way as to blend the images together in a manner closely similar to that in which the two images formed by the eyes in an ordinary seeing are blended.

To understand how the impression of "depth," or relative distance, is produced by the blending together of the two images, one formed by each eye, but both together regarded as a single one by the brain, or the sense of sight, you may try two or three simple experiments.

Begin by setting on one end a short lead pencil upon a sheet of white paper lying on a rather high desk or table. Now, close one eye, and without having experimentally determined the distance of the pencil, try to put your forefinger upon its point. You will almost inevitably fail. With only one eye to see with you cannot judge the distance. You underestimate it, and your finger, though apparently ascending upon the pencil, passes an inch or more inside its true position.

Then open both eyes and you will have no difficulty whatever in putting your finger precisely on the point of the pencil. You require both eyes to get the true perspective. If, however, you repeat the experiment once or twice without changing your position, you can direct your finger successfully with only one eye open, because now experience has taught you the distance.

This shows that at the distance of distinct vision the eyes themselves are able to produce the effect of a blending together of their images so that the brain is aware only of a single image of that object. But the image stands out "in the round," or has "depth," because, as you clearly perceived when you observed them separately with the pencil near the eye, the two images that are now blended into one, show the object one a little around one side and the other a little around the other side, so that, together, they show a little around both sides, the result being that the front of the object is seen projecting toward the observer's eyes in other words, it appears "solid" and not "flat."

Now, the secret of the stereoscope is that its object or view is a pair of photographs, made from slightly divergent points of view, thus imitating the divergent images made by the eyes, and by means of lenses turning the rays of light, the two photographs are blended into one, with the sometimes startling result of making the scene stand out as if it really had four dimensions.

—Medbury Says—

Tea Room Gossip Is Usually More Authentic Than That Over the Back Fence

Tea rooms are springing up all over the country and as fast as they spring up the women are springing into them.

These shops are very reasonable. For twenty-five cents you can get a cup of tea and all the scandal you want.

You can't believe a lot of the gossip you hear over the back fence, but if it comes from a tea room it is usually authentic.

That's why a lot of these tea rooms have open fire places; the women can rake each other over the coals.

The majority of married women never gossip at home on account of the children. They go to these scandal shops where they don't have to spell everything.

Whispering is absolutely barred in these places. A lot of women are hard of hearing.

Some women order gossip the same as they would food. One dame told the proprietor to hand over the Brown divorce case for her and to rehash Mrs. Jones' love affair.

A lot of dames like lemon with their tea, but most of them prefer spice. These tea rooms are very inexpensive if you're a good talker. If you can interest Mrs. Wagner in some gossip about Mrs. Smith, Mrs. Wagner will become so interested that she'll forget herself and pay the check.

Of course you have to fumble a little, but while you are fumbling she'll be paying.

A lot of women carry purses which lock from the inside.

While a tea room is nothing but a roasting rendezvous they are very educational.

After two or three trips to one of these a man can learn to light a match with her fingernail.

And a two faced dame can smoke a cigarette with either face.

Most tea rooms only keep open in the day time because the women are at home at night trying to explain to their husbands why they didn't have dinner ready till 8:30.

These gossip gardens thrive on scandal and the food doesn't have to be much as long as the acoustics are good.

A fortune teller tells your future in a tea cup, but your friends tell your past in a tea room.
